“And he said, Behold your grave-posts
Have no mark, no sign, nor symbol.
Go, paint them all with figures,
Each one with his household symbol,
With its own ancestral totem,
So that those who follow after
May distinguish them and know them.”

It seems proper to remark in the first place, negatively, that in commencing the compilation of the following Genealogical Record the writer had no expectation of being able to trace the family back in the mother country to some titled or wealthy ancestor, consequently he has made no effort to retrace the family beyond the first settler in this country. Nor has he ever hoped, by such retrogressive inquiry, to reach in a direct line of descent any one of those vast estates which many think are stored away in foreign treasuries awaiting legitimate claimants. He has little faith that such treasures anywhere exist. Neither, as it has been intimated to him, did he commence the work nor has he prosecuted it to gratify any personal or family pride in recording the names and history of kindred who at any time have made themselves conspicuous in some department of public life. It was assumed at the outset that few, if any, such would appear. Nor, again, was he influenced by any considerations of pecuniary profit that might accrue. If that had been his motive, he would have been greatly disappointed, for, if the expenses incurred were summed up, and a reasonable per diem compensation allowed for the time spent in gathering materials for the work and putting them in order, the cost per volume would exceed many fold the price the writer has purposed to put upon the work.

But rather, affirmatively, the author engaged in this labor as an agreeable employment for leisure time vouchsafed to him in his declining years, and to satisfy a desire, long cherished, to increase his knowledge of his ancestry and of his immediate relation to their posterity in this country.

To this end he began to examine records and other sources of information, and soon reached a satisfactory conclusion so far as pertains to the first settlement of the family in America. Then, instead of pursuing an expensive and difficult search for earlier records of the family in England, he commenced at that point to trace forward the several branches of the family as they sprang up and spread out in this country. This search, with frequent and sometimes protracted interruptions, has been prosecuted as other duties would permit. The result is shown in the following pages.

Sometimes

"It is well we cannot see What the end shall be."

Although it is not now large in itself, the work has expanded beyond the original anticipations of the writer. In the beginning, as before intimated, he did not design to pursue the subject to the extent he has done, nor to make any part of it public. It was then simply a personal, private matter. He would not then have ventured upon the task of tracing all the migrations and multiplications of a prolific New England family during the period of two and a half centuries. But, as the work progressed and new discoveries were made, the interest increased and perseverance was stimulated.

No little difficulty was experienced in the early searches to separate the members belonging to this branch of the Howard family from those of other branches, bearing the same name, who had resided often in the same place and at the same time. It was no less difficult occasionally from records to distinguish seniors and juniors and other relations in kindred families, as few middle names were then used and the ages of deceased persons were seldom recorded in early times. But the most serious difficulty encountered was the frequent and sometimes the far-distant removals of these people. Few families, it is believed, of its number have more forcibly illustrated the restless and migratory spirit of the human race, or have left behind them more scanty facilities for following them from State to State and from home to home, than this one. Those only who have engaged in a work of this kind can duly appreciate the labors and discouragements to be overcome in this direction, being greatly augmented often by the paucity and inaccuracy of public and private records.

The writer seriously regrets, as his readers will also, doubtless, that he has not been able to gather from records or from the testimony of surviving kindred a greater supply of material indicative of individual characteristics, of personal traits, habits, taste, and culture, as well as of their local influence and the part they bore of public duties and responsibilities. But where material has been obtained, he has annexed to the family statistics a sketch, longer or shorter, of personal history which he hopes will supply in a measure the lack of analysis of character. In many cases, however, little more is learned than that one was born at such a time, lived to such an age, and died in such a place, and sometimes not all this is found. And yet we may not conclude that even these accomplished no purpose in life. It is pleasant to reflect that much of the important work in the world is that which does not lie open to the public view. As with the builder, a large share of whose work lies concealed beneath the level of the earth's surface, and little is known of those who have toiled long and faithfully in laying a solid and sufficient foundation for the imposing structure whose grandeur and beauty are the admiration of the beholder, so, in other fields of human effort, especially in the upbuilding of society, there is often a silent and secluded influence at work which is no less valuable and potent because it is elementary and unrecognized by the multitude, who glory in the results but see not the sequestered causes of the world's progress in wealth and learning, and in whatsoever in moral character is true, and honest, and lovely, and of good report.

It would certainly be a subject of deep interest to surviving kindred, and of congratulation often, if we could study the unobtrusive history of those whose path has been along the more humble walks of life, and measure, so far as we might, the influence such have exerted in moulding and advancing the interests of society, of the church, and of the State. In pursuing such a study, how often and forcibly we should be impressed with this truth: "That things with you and me are not so ill as they might have been, is half owing to the number of those who have lived faithfully a hidden life and rest in unvisited tombs."

There will be found, however, in the following record the names of many in the successive generations who, if not greatly eminent, have occupied and adorned positions in the several learned professions, as well as in all the departments of the varied industries of life. There will be found represented here the clergy of the different denominations; the legal and the medical practitioner; the instructor, from the primary school to the university professor; also the merchant, the financier, the skillful artisan, the adventurous seaman, the sturdy husbandman, the brave warrior, and, more numerous still, the hardy and enterprising pioneer, who was ever pushing on to new scenes of labor in planting in frontier settlements the institutions of civil order, of learning, and of religion. Of such a poet has well said:

"The noblest men I know on earth
Are men whose hands are brown with toil,
Who, backed by no ancestral graves,
Hew down the wood and till the soil."

The early history of this family is involved in some obscurity. The records of the First Church in Ipswich, Mass., previous to about 1722, are lost; and the town records, until about 1661, are also lost or are very meager. In consequence of this entire loss of so many of the church, parish, and town records, and of the incompleteness of those still extant, it is not wholly clear of doubt as to who was the original settler and progenitor of what may properly be called the

IPSWICH BRANCH OF THE HOWARD FAMILY IN AMERICA.

It is highly probable, however, that this ancestor was one Thomas Howard (or Hayward, as the name was sometimes spelled), and that he is the one mentioned by Mr. William Boys in his "History of Sandwich," England. He says there were among the "Emigrants in the Hercules of Sandwich, John Wetherly, master, bound for the plantation called New England, in America, with certificates from the minister where they last dwelt of their conversation and conformity to the order and discipline of the Church, and that they had taken the oath of allegiance, etc.,

Thomas Hayward of Aylesford, tailor,

Susanna his wife, and five children.

Their certificate is signed by William Colpepper, Caleb Banks, Ed^w Duke, Han. Crispe, and Franc Froiden, clerk, and was dated March 14, 1634."

When this family reached this country, the query is, Where did it settle, if not in Ipswich, Mass.? There seems to be only one other of this name spoken of at this early date. Mr. Savage, in his "Biographical Dictionary," has manifestly confused this man with another Thomas Hayward, who came from Cambridge, and shipped at Ipswich, England, in the Elizabeth, William Andrews, master, March 7, 1631, and who at that time or a few years later settled in Duxbury, Mass., where he bought land and continued to reside for several years, but subsequently removed to Bridgewater, was one of the first proprietors, and among the prominent men in the early history of that town, and died there in 1681. Mr. Savage himself admits a doubt whether the Thomas he describes is the "Kentish man or not." He certainly cannot be if Mr. Winsor, in his "History of Duxbury," is correct, since he therein states that the Duxbury Thomas "married Martha and had a large family." The names of these children are given and their descendants are fully traced in the various histories of Bridgewater.

On the other hand, the Ipswich records do not positively identify the Thomas Hayward mentioned therein as the Kentish man, but they furnish no evidence to the contrary.

No mention is made in them of his wife and children. If children were born to him in Ipswich the record was among those early ones that are lost. His own name does not often occur, as we might reasonably expect it would not, since he was a mechanic in moderate circumstances, probably, and not a land owner.

Antiquarians do not fully agree as to the origin and significance of the name Howard. In early times, the first syllable of the word had quite a varied orthography. We find it written Haie, Hae, Hay, Ha, Heie, Hei, Hey, Hone, Hou, etc. "Lower on Surnames" derives the name Hayward from the word Haie, a hedge, and the syllable ward, which is equivalent to the word keeper or guard. Hence Hayward, he says, "denoted anciently a keeper or guard of a common herd of cattle belonging to some town or village, and whose duty it was to oversee this common herd of greater cattle and to keep it within proper limits, that it might not injure the hedges, etc." This office (somewhat modified) and name are still retained in most New England towns. It is more probable, however, that the syllable Ho, which is the more common one of later times, is only the contracted and phonetic orthography of all the preceding forms except Hay and Hey, which are still used to some extent. Howard is the form invariably used by this family in this country when they wrote their own name, and is so spelled on all records since the first, except occasionally in the second generation.

The plan of arranging the families in this work, it will be seen, is not in the order of generations, as is often done in genealogies. It is based rather on the idea of a capacious tree. Commencing at the root, we ascend the main trunk to its branches. In this case there will be found, in the third generation, three sons who grew up and had families. These constitute the three great branches of this ideal genealogical tree. Each of these in succession is followed to its extremity, examining, as we ascend, all collateral branches and their off-shoots. Thus, while each family record is complete in itself, the more nearly connected families are brought as closely as can be into juxtaposition.

The figures annexed to any name in the index and elsewhere denote the number of the family record in the body of the work where the families are put down in numerical order.

Little attempt has been made to continue the record of daughters after their marriage, or to obtain the history of those with whom they intermarried.* But a greater effort than is usual in genealogies has been made to obtain the parentage, date and place of birth, etc., of the ladies who have married into the family name. Though this increased the labor, it has also, it is hoped, enhanced the interest and completeness of the work.

It is hardly necessary to call attention to the abbreviations made use of in these records. It will be at once noticed that the initial letter is often used in place of a word itself, as b. for born, d. for died, m. for married, s. for son of, da. for daughter of, w. for wife of, etc.

In early times, it will be remembered, children were usually baptized soon after birth. Hence, when the date of baptism is given, it indicates nearly the date of birth.

Special effort has been made to secure accuracy in detail, yet errors will doubtless be discovered. These the writer will be glad to have pointed out to him, though he cannot admit that the error is always his own.

The material for this record has been derived from a variety of sources, such as Colonial and Probate Court records, Registries of Deed, town, parish, and church records, inscriptions on tombstones, family records, oral statements, and replies to letters of inquiry. In many instances these are found not to agree with one another. Some statements are made from memory or family tradition, and hence may be erroneous in date.

From about A.D. 527 to 1752, in most Christian countries the year commenced on the 25th of March, the day of the supposed annunciation of the birth of Christ, and is designated O. S., or Old Style. In 1753, by Act of Parliament, in England and all her dominions the year was made to commence on the 1st of January, eleven days were stricken from September, the 3d being called the 14th, and one day was added to February once in four years. This is designated N. S., or New Style. In this work the year has been made to conform to the N. S., but the day of the month has not always been changed. Hence in some dates may arise a seeming error.

In concluding this introduction, the writer would express his warmest thanks to the many of his numerous correspondents, as well as to those he has visited, for the readiness and zeal with which they have assisted him in his inquiries. Had all manifested the same promptness and intelligence, the record would have been more rapidly advanced and less marred by lack of names and dates necessary to its completeness, and other sketches of individual history worthy of notice could have been added.

With the sincere hope that the perusal of the following records will be instructive to some extent, as well as of interest, to the surviving members of this branch of the Howard family, it is cheerfully submitted by

THOMAS HOWARD and w. SUSANNA.

Although this Thomas was undoubtedly the ancestor of the Ipswich family of Howards, little is now known of him except what has been stated in the Introduction, viz.: that he was by trade a tailor; that he resided last before coming to this country, in Aylesford or Maidstone, in the County Kent, in England; that he came to Ipswich early in 1634; that he was admitted a freeman by the General Court, in May, 1678; and that he died in Ipswich a few years later. His age at the time of his decease is not stated, but that he was quite advanced in years is implied by the wording of the record in Ipswich, viz.:

“Old Thomas Hayward
died April 15th, 1686.”

This is all that is left to his memory. If, however, those early records that are lost could be restored, much more respecting him doubtless would be found, as being one of the members and supporters of the early church, and one of the founders and defenders of the then infant township, and one of the planters of those seeds of virtue and culture whose harvest has ever distinguished that ancient town.

Of his children little positively is known. The three following are very likely a part of his family, viz.:

- (a.) JOHN HOWARD. He is mentioned as being a husbandman. He lived in Rowley, and died there in 1694. His age at death is not given. On Sept. 25, 1694, Joseph Boynton was appointed administrator on his estate, which does not seem to have been large. No record is found of his family, though he probably had one.
- (b.) WILLIAM HOWARD (2), b. 1635, in Ipswich, Mass.
- (c.) HANNAH HOWARD. Of her we only know that she was a sister of William (2), as he makes provision for her support in his will, and that she died in Ipswich, according to the record, February, 1725, “a very ancient maid.”

There were others of the name who resided at the Hamlet and in the vicinity of Ipswich at an early date. But I have not been able to connect them closely enough with this family to feel satisfied that they really belong to it.

WILLIAM HOWARD, s. Thomas and Susanna ()
Howard (1), and TABITHA KINSMAN, (?) da. Robert, senior, and () Kinsman.

It is not unquestionably certain who this Tabitha was, since the record of her marriage has disappeared with so many other early records. There are, however, several circumstances that favor the belief that she was, as stated above, the fifth daughter and youngest child of Robert Kinsman, senior, who settled in Ipswich in 1633, and that she married the above William Howard early in the year 1667. As an objection to this supposition, and it is the only one that has come to the notice of the writer, it has been claimed that Tabitha Kinsman, as late as 1674, conveyed real estate in her own name. On examining the deed referred to, however, it appears, in the first place, that she did not make a conveyance at all, but that one Edward Neland sold a piece of marsh land to Ezekiel Rogers, and bounded it on one side by land of Tabitha Kinsman. This of itself would not prove that she at that time held the land in her own right. But, in the second place, it is shown by the deed that, although it was not recorded till 1674, it was dated in 1665, some two years previous to her supposed marriage with Mr. Howard.

That she survived her husband is evidenced by his will, but how long is not known, as no record or monument is found to determine the date of her death.

Mary, their eldest daughter, m., on Oct. 17, 1685, Joseph Fuller, Jr., of Ipswich. Her further record has not been found.

Tabitha m., on Jan. 29, 1689, Christopher Hodgkins of Ipswich. She was the mother of seven children, several of whom were born in Gloucester, Mass., where she seems to have passed most of her married life. After the death of her husband she returned to Ipswich, and there died Sept. 15, 1735.

Mercy m. Daniel Hovey, Jr., of Ipswich. Date not found. They subsequently moved, it is believed, to eastern Connecticut, and died in Hampton.

Martha remained unmarried. She was long a worthy member of the first Congregational Church in Ipswich, and died there June 23, 1748.

The above three sons of William and Tabitha, viz.: William, John, and Samuel, lived to manhood and had families. These constitute the three main branches of the ideal genealogical tree, or give rise to three distinct lines of descent, which are hereinafter traced in the order of their ages.

But first and further in regard to this William Howard, senior (2). He was, without reasonable doubt, the son of Thomas and Susanna (1), but the exact date of his birth is not found. The record of his death on July 25, 1709, and the inscription on his tombstone, as shown on another page, prove that he was born in 1635. Hence a peculiar interest attaches to his early life, as being nearly co-incident with that of Ipswich itself as a town, it having been incorporated as such in 1635. He was also the first child born to this branch of the Howard family in America. We gather only a few incidents of his early life. By trade he was a hatter, which was quite an industry at that time in Ipswich. But of whom he learned the business does not appear. As a citizen he seems to have been somewhat prominent, though his name is not mentioned as an office-holder. He was made a freeman by the General Court; was a commoner by vote of the town, and permitted to fell trees; also, with Joseph Fuller, to build a wharf, which is probably the one still standing, or one on the same site, on the south side of Ipswich River, now known as the Foss wharf. He also had a pew in the first Congregational Church, and was probably an active member of that church and society.

While yet a young man, he began to accumulate property, which at first he seems to have loaned on mortgage, but afterward to invest in real estate, and thus he became quite a land-holder, owning tracts of greater or less extent on Plum Island, on and near Treadwell's Island and Boardman's Creek, in "Labor-in-Vain-field," and on both sides of the old highway leading to the farm now owned by Mr. Gould. His homestead was a six-acre lot, with an orchard, dwelling-house, barn, etc., upon it, and described as "situated upon the south side of the river, having the land of Daniel Ringe on the northeast side on a straight line from the highway to land of John Dane, senior; on the southeast and southwest, by land of said John Dane, senior; and on the northwest end by the highway that runs along by the River." These premises were formerly owned and perhaps occupied by Thomas Emerson, an ancestor of the honored Ralph Waldo Emerson. They were sold by him, in 1648, to Daniel Ringe, sen. They afterwards descended to Susanna Ringe, a daughter-in-law and heir of Daniel Ringe, sen. By her they were conveyed to Usual Wardell, in 1669, of whom this William Howard purchased them some ten years later. He also owned another house near to this, and other lots adjacent and extending southerly to the high ground now known as Heartbreak Hill. The house in which he lived and died and bequeathed to his sons John and Samuel, is still standing and known to the older citizens of Ipswich as the "Samuel Howard house," but more generally called the "Wallis house." As originally built, it was only a part of the present house. A short time before his death, as appears by his will, he put up a new stack of chimneys and built on a new part. The newer end, therefore, must have now been standing about 175 years. The other end was an old building then. (See 236.)

The following is the more important part of his last will, which is dated July 23, 1709, only two days before his decease. It is inserted as a fitting close to the preceding sketch, as well as a specimen of such ancient papers, and an interesting and valuable genealogical document.

“In the name of God, Amen. I, William Howard, senior, of Ipswich living in the County of Essex in the Province of Massachusetts Bay in New England, hatmaker, being very ill & weak of body though of a sound & disposing mind & memory, praise be given therefor to Almighty God, do make & ordain this my last Will & Testament in manner & form following. That is to say, firstly & principally I commend my soul into the hands of Almighty God, hoping by the merit, death & passion of my Lord Jesus Christ, to have free & full pardon & forgiveness of all my sins & to inherit everlasting life; & my body I commit to the earth to be decently buried at the discretion of my executors hereinafter named. And as touching the distribution of all such personal estate as it hath pleased God to bestow upon me, I give & bequeath as follows:

“1st I will my debts & funeral expenses be paid and discharged.

“Item. I give unto my loving & well beloved wife the use both of the old end of my house mansion & of the new end so far as she shall have occasion for during her natural life. I give to my said wife all my household goods to be at her sole use and disposal & do by these presents firmly oblige my two executors hereinafter named to pay unto my said wife annually during her natural life, five pounds, that is, each of my two executors shall pay fifty shillings by the year aforesaid.

Item: I give to my son William Howard, the dwelling-house and orchard as now enclosed with fence,” (about $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres) “which I purchased of Usual Wardell, and barn now enclosed upon said land, together with one acre of the pasture land which I bought of said Wardell, lying at the southeast end adjoining to the above orchard, and also one acre of land on the hill which I bought of Joseph Lee.

Item: I give to my two sons, John and Samuel Howard, viz.: to my son John the new end of my house mansion, which is not yet fully finished, with half the stack of chimneys built in said new end which will best serve for the use thereof.

Item: I give to my son Samuel my old mansion house and also one-half of the stack of chimneys built in the new end of said house which will best suit for the accommodation of said mansion house, together with the weaver's shop, so called, which the said Samuel hath to weave in.

Item: I give to my two sons, John and Samuel, all the rest and residue of my estate both real and personal, goods, and chattels whatsoever, they paying out the several legacies, and duly attending to the several duties hereafter named: that is to say; I give to my three daughters, Mary Fuller, Tabitha Hodgkin, and Mercy Hovey, to each of them twenty shillings besides what I have already given them.

I give to my daughter Martha twenty pounds, all to be paid by my executors, hereafter named, in three years after my decease.

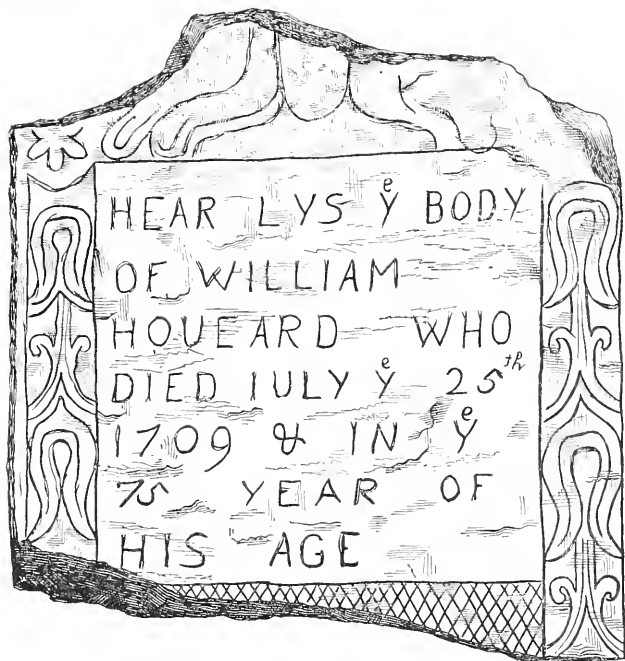

Finally: I do oblige my two sons, John and Samuel, in consideration and tenure of what I have given to them after my decease, to keep, maintain, and sustain my sister Hannah Howard during her natural life, with suitable meat, drink, and clothing, washing, and lodging, food, and physie, and at the end thereof, afford her a suitable interment.

I do by these presents appoint, constitute, and ordain my two sons, John and Samuel Howard, to be joint executors of this, my last will and testament, and I do hereby revoke all other former Wills heretofore made," etc.

This Will was proved August 1, 1709, at which time the three brothers entered into an agreement changing somewhat the provisions of the bequests so as to open a driveway through each others' land for the better accommodation of all the parties. "Said way to each parcel of land as laid down to be theirs and their heirs forever." This driveway was near to, if not the origin of the present old road leading southerly from the Turkey shore road, as now called, opposite the county buildings, and thence westwardly to the South Church in Ipswich.

Mr. Howard was buried in the High street cemetery in Ipswich. A fragment of his tombstone, though out of its place, is still preserved in the grave-yard. A fac-simile of which as seen below, and also of the old Howard house (236), were kindly furnished by Mr. Arthur W. Dow of Ipswich, copied from original drawing by him for his "Ipswich Illustrated."

Ruth m. Simeon Wood, Jr., of Ipswich, Nov. 16, 1732. He died Dec. 12, 1740. She remained his widow and died Nov., 1768, in Ipswich.

Mr. William Howard, the father, inherited from his father, as is shown by his will, one of the houses and part of the land formerly owned by Mr. Usual Wardell, which he continued to occupy for several years after, as he probably had done for some years previous to his father's death. By occupation he was a husbandman. After the death of his wife, he disposed of his homestead to Mr. Increase How. A William Howard, supposed to be this one, was published in Ipswich, to a widow, Elizabeth Payne of Gloucester, Mass., Sept. 15, 1733. They were married in Gloucester, in October following, and probably they continued to reside there till his death some years later. Date not found. She died there about July, 1753.

JOSEPH HOWARD was appointed administrator on the estate of widow Elizabeth Howard of Gloucester, Aug. 13, 1753. This Joseph was possibly a son by the above marriage and only heir of his mother, as the records do not show any distribution of estate on final settlement and approval of his account. On this assumption the following particulars found on the Gloucester Records have properly a place here, viz.: that he continued to reside there. On Aug. 17, 1758, m. to Miss MARY WILLIAMS, by the Rev. Samuel Chandler.

On the roll of members of the first Church of Ipswich, made in 1746, and is the oldest one extant, is "the wife of William Howard." Among the deaths there recorded is the following: "Aug., 1782, d. the widow Howard, æ. 83." This date and age point to Mrs. Bethiah Howard, above. Mr. Howard probably followed the sea as an occupation, though nothing definite in regard to him is found, nor of the further history of his daughter Bethiah, or second son, William. NATHANIEL HOWARD, s. William and Bethiah (Reymond) Howard (5), b. June 29, 1735, in Ipswich, d. Nov., 1776, in Newburyport, and MARTHA SAFFORD, da. John and Martha (Haskins) Safford of Ipswich, bapt. Apr. 8, 1738, in Ipswich, d. 1765, in Newburyport, Mass., m. January 8, 1757, in Ipswich, Mass., and settled in Newburyport; m. second, published on Apr. 11, 1767, in Newburyport, KATURAH WYATT, parentage not found, b. 1735, and d. Dec. 4, 1818, in Newburyport, a. 83.

No record of children being born to him by either marriage is found, and we can learn little of his history. When he was about fifteen years of age, his brother Benjamin was appointed his guardian, and he was apprenticed to some mechanic art, probably sail-making. He must have acquired some means and standing in society, as, on the death of his brother Benjamin, he was accepted as surety for his sister-in-law Millie, who administered her husband's estate.

Sarah, the eldest daughter, m. Benjamin Norton, a sail-maker in Newburyport, where she lived and died; date not found.

Judith m. Robert Fowle of Newburyport, a stone-cutter by trade. He carried on business in Boston, where she died; was buried in Newburyport.

Mr. Howard was by occupation a tailor. Before his marriage he seems to have settled in Newbury, probably learned his trade there. He carried on business in what was first called New Lane, afterwards Cross Street, and now Middle Street, included in Newburyport. He appears to have been a quiet, industrious, and respectable man, and to have accumulated considerable property for a mechanic in those days. At his death, the real estate was distributed to the widow and children, but subsequently the shares were mostly bought in by his son Isaac, who afterwards sold out to Ebenezer Hoyt.

WILLIAM HOWARD, s. Benjamin and Millie (Sweet) Howard (7), b. Apr. 2, 1750, in Newbury, Mass., d. Sept. 28, 1798, in Newburyport, and EUNICE NICHOLDS, da. Daniel and Elizabeth () Nicholds, of Amesbury, b. July 11, 1748, in Amesbury, Mass., pub. Feb. 28, 1772, in Newburyport, Mass.

He was by trade a boat-builder, and seems to have carried on an extensive business in Newburyport. His yard was located near what was then called Kent's Landing, having some sixty feet fronting on Merrimack Street, and extending back to the Merrimack River, with a dwelling-house, barn, boat-sheds, wharf, etc. His brother Stephen settled his estate. The "river lot," so called, with the wharf, etc., was sold to John Tucker. The dwelling and the other lots were sold to William Morrison, and can be easily traced. No direct record of children being born to him is found, but circumstances indicate that the following William, Jr., was his son, and hence his record, so far as known, is inserted below.

WILLIAM HOWARD, JR., s. of William and Eunice (Nicholds) Howard (s), (date of birth and death not found,) and Abigail, their daughter, died Feb., 1792, and Susanna died Dec. 24, 1847. She was unmarried.

Polly Norton m. Richard W. Rodgers of Boston, where she resided, and died Feb. 24, 1816, leaving one son, since deceased.

Stephen, their son, remained unmarried. He died in his native city, Mar. 28, 1835.

George Norton was a mariner, and unmarried. He was second officer of the brig Vancouver, out of Boston, and lost overboard, in latitude 6° 46' south, longitude 104° 50' east, Aug. 31, 1822.

Thomas F., it is said, also followed the sea mainly, as a business. On the death of his father, he and his brother Stephen invested their patrimony in the drug business, in Portland, Me., or vicinity. Not succeeding to their wishes in this, Stephen returned to Newburyport, and Thomas again took to the sea. His subsequent career is not known. His brother Charles d. Mar. 25, 1823.

Edward Frothingham was in the dry goods business in New York City, and died there, unmarried, Feb. 27, 1845.

Stephen Howard, Esq., as the above is usually designated, was quite a prominent man in Newburyport, in his time. He was an esteemed, enterprising, and public-spirited citizen. He took a personal and pecuniary interest in all matters tending to facilitate travel to Boston and intervening cities, to advance the interests of commerce and manufactures, as well as those of education and religion. In some early deeds on record, he is described as a “mariner.” In his earlier life, when Newburyport was deeply engaged in ship-building and commerce, he seems to have followed a sea-faring life, taking part in the West India trade, then so profitable. He, later, became a merchant, residing and doing business in Pleasant Street, where he died, leaving to his family a large estate, for that day. Though he was not technically a religious man, he is said to have been a regular attendant on public worship, and active in society affairs. For several years he was one of the Proprietors Committee, and also one of the Parish Committee of the Fourth Church, where he owned sittings.

He was a valued member and R. W. Master of St. Peter's Lodge of F. & A. M. He held various positions of public and personal trusts, and always discharged his duties with promptness and fidelity. In private life he was generous, courteous, and affable. As a friend he was warm-hearted, reliable, and judicious.

Rev. Dr. William George Howard seems to have had a somewhat eventful life. After serving for a time as a dry goods clerk, he commenced studies preparatory for college, in Newburyport, under Mr. George Lunt, and afterwards in Woburn, Mass., under Mr. Alfred W. Pike. He graduated at Amherst College, in 1835. He then began the study of theology, under the Rev. Dr. Dana, in Newburyport, but subsequently he changed his religious views, and became a Baptist. From his family record, he seems to have spent some time in Connecticut and Ohio, probably as a teacher. He then went to New Orleans, where he was first licensed to preach, date not stated. He returned north, and was ordained and settled as pastor of a Baptist Church in Middletown, Conn., Sept. 8, 1843. Afterwards he removed to Essex, Conn.; thence to Albany, N. Y.; then he became pastor of the Second Baptist Church in Rochester, N. Y., and received, in 1854, the degree of D.D. from the Rochester University. From Rochester, he went to Chicago, Ill., as pastor of the Second Baptist Church in that city. Subsequently, he was settled as pastor of the Coliseum Place Baptist Church in New Orleans, La. When the late war broke out, he involuntarily became chaplain of one of the Confederate regiments, was captured at Fort Donelson, and for a time he was a prisoner at Camp Douglas, in Chicago. On his return to New Orleans, he was accused of a want of zeal in the Confederate cause, which so lowered him in the estimation of his people that he was not re-instated in his pastorate. He thence retired to Alexandra, Rapides Co., La., where his sister resided, and there he passed the brief remainder of his chequered life. He died suddenly, of heart disease, in New Orleans, where he had gone on business.

His widow resides with her son, in Shreveport, La.

Ellen Lydia, his daughter, m. Charles P. Butler of Hartford, Conn., and resides in New York City.

Mr. S. E. Howard acquired his early education in the schools of Newburyport, and three years spent in Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H. At the age of sixteen, he went to Boston, an apprentice in the dry goods business, where he remained some five years. He then went to New York City, as clerk, at a small salary, in the house of William H. Carey & Co. After two years he became a member of the firm, and has since continued one of the house, though under different firm names. The one long and favorably known was that of Howard, Sanger & Co. This is one of the few mercantile houses of New York that has stood unshaken by the many gales of financial disaster that have swept over the country during the past forty years. In 1880, Mr. Howard relinquished to his sons, under the firm name of Howard Brothers & Reed, the more active duties and responsibilities of the business, though he still retains a large interest therein. Few men have applied themselves more constantly, carefully, and assiduously to business, or with more uniform success. Commencing with a small capital, he has added to it from year to year, and multiplied it to an ample fortune. Though naturally modest and unassuming, and shrinking intuitively from public notice, he has held high official positions, both in New York and Brooklyn, in various financial and other incorporated institutions, and is held in great confidence and esteem by all with whom he has business and social relations.

Mr. Howard above was by occupation a fisherman, and lost his life while thus engaged off Cape Canso, Nova Scotia, leaving an unusually large number of little children, as is shown by the foregoing record. Few traces of this family are found except of Thomas, whose record immediately follows. July 10, 1760, Mr. Joseph Tilton of Ipswich was legally appointed guardian of Sammel, but for what purpose does not appear. On April 5, 1866, Mr. John Roberts of Ipswich was published to Mrs. Sarah Howard, probably the widow of the foregoing Hezekiah.

Thomas Howard, above, was by trade a tanner and currier. He learned the business in Pomfret, Conn., of his uncle John (93), with whom he seems to have lived from boyhood, perhaps from the death of his father, when he was about three years old. After he had completed his apprenticeship and had acquired some means of his own, he engaged somewhat in farming as well as in the tanning business. He owned several tracts of land in Pomfret. His homestead was a seventy-two acre lot, with a house, barn, and other buildings thereon, which he bought of Oliver and Abial Cheeney, "being the whole of the farm where now lives the said Oliver Cheeney." This and an eight acre lot adjoining he sold in October, 1777. It is situated on the road leading north from Pomfret street, and is now (1880) owned and occupied by Mr. Lyman Fitts. Soon after this sale he bought a farm, etc., in Tolland, Conn., and moved there in 1779. This farm fronted on the west side of Tolland street, near the north end, and extended westward across the present turnpike road leading to Hartford, including the old tannery works, since the belt works, and about ninety-five acres of land. The dwelling-house in which he lived, but was long since removed, stood near the northeast corner of the meadow on which the Methodist meeting-house stands. The old well which marks the location is still made use of in times of drought. He seems to have been a man of prominence and influence, both in Pomfret and Tolland. He and his wife were both members of the Congregational Church in Pomfret, and their children born in Pomfret were all baptized there. The records of the church in Tolland, however, do not show that they ever united with the church in that place. They subsequently took quite an interest in the Methodists or New Lights as they were early called. They entertained, it is said, the first preacher of that denomination who ever came to Tolland, and at their house the preachers afterwards were accustomed to meet and consult together when they had a day of leisure on the circuit. Mr. Howard also gave the site on which the Methodist meeting-house has since stood. He also prospered financially and left something of an estate, notwithstanding his large family of fourteen children.

Priscilla, their eldest daughter, m. first, on Jan. 17, 1799, Israel Williams of Woodstock, Conn., by whom she had three sons. Her husband died in Franklin, N. Y., Oct., 1807. She m. second, on March 26, 1812, Asahel Packard of Otego, Otsego Co., N. Y. They afterwards settled in Unadilla, N. Y., where she died Dec. 8, 1861, in the ninety-third year of her age.

Lois, their other daughter, m. on Feb. 26, 1805, Thomas Soule of Duxbury, Mass. She was the mother of five children. She died in Abington, Mass., May 4, 1842.

Of their sons, four died while young, viz.: Samuel, Nov. 27, 1785. Thomas, March 3, 1772. Hezekiah, Aug. 27, 1782; and Samuel Dana, July 24, 1800.

Mary, their eldest daughter, m. Apr. 4, 1815, Jeduthan Rawdon of Tolland. They settled in Warren, Trumbull Co., O., where he died Feb. 21, 1850. She was the mother of fourteen children, ten of whom died in infancy. The other four grew up to marry, and have families. Two only survived the mother, and at their home in Collingwood, near Cleveland, O., she died Sept. 14, 1882, in the ninetieth year of her age.

Orra, the second daughter, m. Feb. 27, 1825, in Tolland, Conn., James Crane of Wethersfield, Conn., who died in Tolland Nov. 6, 1841, leaving four children. Mrs. Crane soon after moved to Hartford, Conn., where she became extensively known and highly esteemed. About a year before her decease she removed to West Hartford with her younger daughter, Mrs. Daniel G. Francis, at whose home she expired Nov. 9, 1883.

Ruth Steele, the other daughter, m. in Tolland, Hon. Austin D. Kibbee, for many years an active, trusted, and respected merchant and citizen of West Farmington, Trumbull Co., O.

She died in West Farmington May 12, 1838, leaving two children.

Mr. Asa Howard was by trade a boot and shoemaker. His residence was on the old road to Hartford at the north end of the village of Tolland, Conn. The house is now taken down, but the site affords one of the most charming landscapes in all New England. It is situated on an eminence. In front, near its foot, lies the broad street of the village, with its beautiful greens and stately elms. Beyond, southerly, is seen the waters of a silvery lake. Stretching away still further in the distance, and on either hand, is a succession of hills and valleys, giving variety and beauty to the view, while the rear is hemmed in by a bolder eminence, venerable in its very name, "Bald Hill," the summit of which gives an extended view of the valley of the Connecticut River and adjoining country towns. Words cannot, the brush of the artist only can, bring out the picture.

Previous to his marriage, Mr. Howard resided for several years in New Haven, Conn., and was connected with the stage lines running between that city and Hartford. Soon after his marriage he removed to Cleveland, Ohio, when that city was comparatively in its infancy. By his industry and shrewdness in making investments, he there prospered financially, and accumulated a handsome fortune. For some years past, since death broke up his happy home, he has been enjoying the fruits of his labor in traveling and visiting his friends, with whom his liberal and social nature always makes him a welcome guest.

Mary Wright, resides in Preble. She has never married.

Sophia Caroline, m. May, 1851, Orrin Pratt of Preble. They have three children.

Between the two brothers, Thomas above and Harvey (51), there existed a long and singular community of interests in all their business relations. All that can be said of one is equally true of the other. They were by occupation like their father, tanners and curriers, as well as farmers, and probably they learned their trade in early life at home. On attaining their majority, or before, they commenced business for themselves in Wilbraham, Mass. They were married while there, and several of their children were born there. About 1803 they made an arrangement with their father, who was now advanced in years and too infirm to carry on business for himself, and they returned to Tolland, and established themselves in the old tan-works in the northern part of the village. On the death of their father, some two years later, partly by inheritance and partly by agreement, with the other heirs, they came into possession of the homestead farm, and tan works. They remained here together about twelve years. They then disposed of these premises and started with their families in the then fashionable long covered wagons and ox teams, for that then far distant and little known State of Ohio. After the protracted toils and discomforts of a six weeks' journey, they reached the then infant town of Preble, in Cortland County, N. Y. Finding here a few eastern families, and needing rest, they made what proved to be a permanent stop. They bought farms and commenced to till them, and though these parents, and many of their children, have passed away, these farms are still held and cultivated by their descendants. During all these years of their business relations, which terminated only with their lives, these brothers made no formal settlements, no questions of mine and thine were raised, nor did either call anything his own. And yet, it is said, there was a friendly and scrupulous division of proceeds. What one took, the other took also. If one sent a bag of corn to mill, the other sent an equal measure, and the miller must not change the contents of the bags. If one family had a set of silver spoons, the other must have a set of the same weight, fineness, and fashion, but the engraver must not change the packages given him by each, but put the initial letters upon the very spoons left by the parties, respectively. They were both warm supporters of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and according to the spirit of that age, they were very tenacious of its forms and ceremonies, placing much stress upon external appearances, such as the single-breasted coat, the smooth hair, the plain bonnet, and the absence of all ornamentation. They contributed liberally towards the building of the first meeting-house, and for the support of the young society. Both, as the record shows, had large families, but it is worthy of notice that only one young and unmarried grandson to each, survives to perpetuate their name.

Martha M. m. Isaac M. Newton of Kinsman, Trumbull Co., O., where she resides.

Lucy Ann d. June 12, 1863, in Orwell. She was unmarried.

Col. George A., as he is familiarly known, commenced his active life a farmer, teaching a district school for several winters. Later, in company with others, he commenced a manufacturing and mercantile business in Tolland on the Skungamung, a little river and hamlet a mile east of Tolland village. The enterprise proved disastrous to the firm. In the spring of 1833 he moved from Tolland to Bristol, Ohio. Subsequently he went to Windsor, in Ashtabula Co., Ohio, and in 1837 he settled in Orwell, Ohio, as a merchant and financier. In all these places he was successful in his business. By enterprise, prudence, and judicious use of capital, he accumulated a goodly estate, which was rapidly increasing at the time of his death. His political affinities appear in the fact that he was once nominated for Congress, against the lamented Garfield, and polled a much larger vote than is usual in that district. In his nature he was social, genial, and popular, especially in early life, with the military of his native State. He was sympathetic, and generous to the needy, warm and true in his friendships, and singularly happy in his conjugal relations. But, unfortunately, the seeds of consumption, sown by their grandmother, resulted in a sad harvest of disease and death among his children.

In early life he manifested quite a taste for painting, and devoted some time to that art. He eventually abandoned that, as a profession, and entered upon business in Cleveland, Ohio, and subsequently in Buffalo, N. Y. On the death of his father, being one of the executors and principal heir to the estate, he moved to Orwell, where with his family and mother he has since resided.

RUBY WEST, da. Solomon and Catherine (Carpenter) West of Tolland, b. Dec. 19, 1791, in Tolland, and d. there, Mar. 22, 1846, without issue.

Mr. Howard seems not to have been apprenticed to any mechanical art, but followed farming in a limited way. Soon after his marriage he settled in Franklin, Delaware Co., N. Y., where he remained till the spring of 1811, when he returned to Tolland with his family, and continued to reside there most of his subsequent life, much respected. He was a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a local preacher. For many years he was Assistant Postmaster, and was appointed Town Clerk for sixteen years successively, from 1820 to 1836.

The Rev. O. R. Howard, D.D., above, was noted while yet a lad, for his fondness for books and study. Manual labor seemed unnatural and irksome to him. When called to it by circumstances or parental authority, as soon as the service was performed, or a sense of duty would permit, he would return with alacrity to his favorite pursuits. Fortunately for him, when his age and circumstances seemed to warrant his entering upon a regular course of classical studies, an academy was incorporated and started in Tolland. The Hon. William Strong, late a Judge of the Supreme Court of the United States, then a recent graduate of Yale College, was one of its early principals. Under him and his able successors he completed his preparatory studies, entered Yale College in 1831, and graduated in 1835. For two years after his graduation he had charge of the Milford (Del.) Academy. The two years following he was a preacher in and near Boston, Mass., connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church. The next year he spent in N. Y. city in the Methodist Book Concern, and as assistant editor of the Christian Advocate and Journal. Then for two years he went to Buenos Ayres, South America, as a missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In the summer of 1842 he returned to the United States, and for three years he was principal of Fairfield Academy in Herkimer Co., N. Y. In 1845 he moved to western New York, and officiated as a Methodist preacher one year each in Erwin, Steuben Co., Lyons, Wayne Co., and Geneva, Ontario Co., N. Y. Parts of 1848-9 he devoted to special theological studies, and in the latter year he was ordained a minister of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and for eight years following he was rector of St. Peter's parish in Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y. He then removed to Bath, Steuben Co., N. Y., and became rector of St. Thomas Church in that place, where he has since labored, greatly beloved by his parishioners, and esteemed by the neighboring clergy and the community at large. The degree of D.D. was conferred upon him by Hobart College, July 15, 1865.

He was by trade a boot and shoe maker. He served an apprenticeship in his native village, but with whom it is not stated. When he was ready to set up for himself he seems to have met the difficulty young men often did and do still, in suiting himself to a locality. Soon after his marriage he moved to Brimfield, Mass., but did not long remain there, as by the record it appears that his first child and only daughter was born in Wilbraham, Mass., the spring following. Some two years later he was in business for a time in Enfield, Mass. In 1810, and perhaps for a year or two before, he was residing in Northampton, Mass. The next year, 1811, he lived in Stafford, Conn. He then returned to Tolland, where he continued to reside till his death. His experience is another illustration of the adage that "a rolling stone gathers no moss."

Physically he was a fine specimen of a man. He was of full medium height, square, robust form, erect figure, a well-formed head, expanded forehead, regular features, and a mild hazel eye. In temper he was mild and uniform. His bump of mirthfulness was more fully developed than that of reverence. He was generous to a fault, and social in his habits to his own great detriment. His domestic affections were very warm and deep, and his inconsolable grief on the loss of his wife, aggravated, if it did not induce, the disease that soon laid him beside her in the grave.

Married second, Dec. 5, 1863, in New Braintree, Mass.,
 SUSAN NEWELL (JOHNSON) CONKLIN, da. Nathaniel and Jane (Nichols) Johnson, b. Nov. 9, 1814, in Charlton, Mass.

He has no children by this marriage.

Helen M., his daughter, m. March 22, 1866, in Meriden, Conn., Edwin R. Bogardus, a lawyer by profession, practising in New York City, but had his residence in Tarrytown, N. Y. He died in New Preston, Conn., Sept. 17, 1868, while temporarily there with his family. She has one daughter, named Hattie Sophia, b. Mar. 28, 1867. Her residence is Newtonville, Mass.

Mr. J. C. Howard passed the early portion of his life in manual labor, mostly on a farm, attending a district school a few months during winter. On the death of his parents he went to Boston, and for some two years was in the family of the late Dr. B. B. Wisner, then pastor of the Old South Church. Here he came in contact with many of the leading men in the various Christian and benevolent enterprises of the times. Listening to their conversations and discussions, the desire originated in his own mind, and a purpose was formed, to pursue a regular course of collegiate and professional education. To this end he went to Monson Academy in the spring of 1828, which was then under the charge of the Rev. Simeon Colton. By great assiduity he was able, in the autumn of 1829, to enter the freshman class in Yale College. This, however, proved an unwise step. The change from an active to a sedentary life, and the continued close application to study required to enter college on so brief a preparation, and then to maintain an honorable standing in the class, induced a nervous affection of the whole system, that obliged him to relinquish his studies altogether for a time. He returned the following spring, without means, without health, under feelings of deep despondency, to his native village, and passed the summer in the family of his uncle, the late Luther Eaton, Esq., of Tolland, whose kindness and encouragement will ever be held in grateful remembrance. By mental rest and judicious physical exercise, he was so far recovered as to be able to return to college the next autumn, and enter the then freshman class, with which he graduated with honors in 1834, and received the degree of Master of Arts in 1837.

After graduation he went to Litchfield Co., Conn., engaged for six months as teacher of a select school in the town of Warren. At the expiration of the term he renewed the engagement, and again for a third six months. Proposals were then made by individuals, to make the school a permanent one, provided he would continue in charge of it. By the urgency of the people interested in the school, and the advice of judicious friends, he was induced to relinquish other professional studies, and devote himself to teaching, in which he continued some thirty years, many of which were in this school. In 1838-9 he had charge of the Highland Gymnasium in Fishkill, N. Y., and in 1845-6 he was principal of the Norwich Academy, in Norwich, Chenango Co., N. Y. With these exceptions he labored in Warren till the spring of 1854, when he moved to Sharon, Conn., for one year. The next two years he spent in Hartford, Conn., and vicinity teaching. He was appointed in the spring of 1857 principal of a large graded and high school in West Meriden, Conn.

This office he held till the autumn of 1864, when he resigned the position and relinquished the profession. Subsequently, for several years, he was a general agent for the Aetna Life Ins. Co. of Hartford. Since resigning this agency he has been engaged in no regular employment. In the fall of 1867 he moved his family from Meriden, Conn., to Mt. Vernon, N. Y., where he resided till the spring of 1880, when he moved to Brooklyn, N. Y., his present home.

To the preceding autobiographical sketch, friendship prompts to a few additional lines. At the time Mr. Howard devoted himself to teaching as a life work, few young men had chosen that business as a profession. The public mind, however, was beginning to be aroused to the importance of having better schools, and as a preliminary thereto, to the necessity of having a better qualified class of teachers. Mr. H. entered with zeal into this labor. In his own school he discarded the old method of simply hearing what the pupil had memorized from the text-book. His first effort was to inspire in the mind a love of knowing, and then to point out the best way to learn, unfolding the principles involved in each lesson, and showing their relations, removing obstacles, and putting the faculties of the young mind into operation, or setting the mental machine in motion. He thus soon gave to his school a reputation for order and efficiency, which characterized it as long as it remained under his charge. Pupils came to it from adjoining towns and counties, and from distant cities. Though it was not professedly a normal school, a term seldom passed without a class of those who were preparing to teach, and from which many schools were annually supplied with teachers. Although the school dwindled and soon ceased to be, after Mr. H. left it, its influence for good is still remembered and acknowledged, and its loss deplored by the people of the place.

Besides his labors in the school, Mr. Howard took a lively interest in all local matters, and bore his share of local offices and responsibilities, as is shown in part by an extract from a letter written Nov. 4, 1844, by the pastor of the Congregational Church in Warren, in reply to inquiries made by the Trustees of Norwich Academy, viz.:

"I am well acquainted with Mr. Jarvis C. Howard, having been his class-mate and room-mate in Yale College, and during the past year his townsman and near neighbor. While in college he was universally esteemed, both by the faculty and students, for his excellent character, fine sense, and thorough scholarship. The estimation in which he is held in this town may be inferred if I mention that, on my coming here, I found him a Justice of the Peace, to which office he had been appointed for successive years by the concurrent voice of all parties; the Superintendent of the Sabbath School; President of the School Society; Chairman of Committee of the Ecclesiastical Society, etc. As a teacher, from my own observation and the judgment of this community, I can safely affirm that he has few, if any, superiors. His government is perfect, and his success in communicating knowledge all that could be asked or expected. By his own merits, skill, and enterprise he has succeeded, in the face of many difficulties arising from location, in establishing a flourishing academy in this place, and still continues it now after ten years, with increasing reputation and success," etc.

Many other equally favorable testimonials from officials where he later taught could be quoted if deemed necessary. Subsequently to the above date Mr. Howard was elected Town Clerk and Treasurer, and in 1851 he represented the town in the State Legislature, in which he was a member and chairman of several important committees.

While in Meriden he was a member of the State Teachers' Association, and for several years was its Corresponding Secretary. He was also a member and chairman of the Town Board of Education, also President of the Library Association, since merged in the Young Men's Christian Association.

Soon after he settled in Mt. Vernon he was elected by the village a member of the Board of Education, also a member of the Board of Village Trustees, and to the Board of Audit of Town Accounts, of which he was chairman. He also has had the settlement of several valuable estates. In every position of duty and trust he has been found faithful, energetic, and of unswerving integrity. From early boyhood he has been noted for his industry, perseverance, and self-reliance. He is cautious in forming an opinion, but when once formed, nothing but the clearest conviction of error can force him to abandon it. The simple fact that others, even for generations past, have held to certain opinions, is a slight argument with him for adopting the same opinions. Valid reasons must be assigned to challenge his belief. Still he was never dogmatic in spirit. If he differed from others in opinion, as he did in later life, especially in matters of religion, he never urged his points offensively, nor seemed desirous of disturbing another one's belief. He allowed to all the same freedom of thought that he claimed for himself. Although in later years he did not assent to all the tenets advanced in any pulpit, he was a regular attendant upon public worship, and contributed to its support. He was charitable in cases of known necessity, but had no patience with tramps and street door beggars.

Constant and hearty in his domestic affections, to him emphatically,

"There was no place like home."

By profession he is a dentist. He studied with his uncle, Dr. R. G. Reynolds, of New York City. After practicing there for a few years, Dr. Howard opened an office in Riverhead, N. Y., where he resided till 1867, when he removed to Sag Harbor, N. Y., where he has since continued his professional practice. In early life he developed a fondness and capacity for instrumental music, and became quite proficient as a pianist and organist, which has added to his usefulness in church service, as well as having been a source of pleasure and profit in connection with his dentistry.

Charlotte Sophia, their daughter, was b. Apr. 13, 1873, in Boston, d. there Apr. 18, 1873.

His business has been connected mostly with financial matters. When he was about fifteen years of age, he was appointed teller in Home Bank, in West Meriden, Conn., and he remained in that institution till the war of the Rebellion. In the autumn of 1861, he was appointed assistant paymaster in the U. S. Navy, and he served in that capacity till the close of the war. His accounts were immediately closed, and found satisfactory to the government. He afterwards went to Boston, and became Secretary of a fire insurance company, which office he still (1880) holds. His ruling fancy was for vocal music. Though not a singer himself, his taste for the art is shown in several compositions he published, and particularly in his conjugal selections. A brief extract from an obituary notice of the death of his first wife is here inserted, although it is a stepping aside somewhat from the usual course of these records.

"The citizens of Meriden will hear with profound regret, of the death of Mrs. Sarah A. Howard, which occurred at Boston, on Sunday last. As Miss Markham she studied music under several masters. She was principal soprano for three or four years in the choir of the First Congregational Church, and her soft, sweet, and sympathetic voice will linger long in the memory of those who were privileged to listen to such strains.

At our public concerts she was an immense favorite. She had a naturally frank, winsome way with her, which took all hearts by storm, and established affinity between her and her audience truly remarkable. She had exquisite taste in the selection and rendition of music. There was no straining after effect, all was easy, natural, graceful. About two years ago, she married Mr. Charles R. Howard, and moved to Boston, where she pursued her studies still further, in the New England Conservatory of Music, with great success. With her sweetly expressive voice, combined with an attractive figure, and a sunny, charming face, she would soon have taken a position in the foremost rank of our popular singers. She was cut down in the flower of her youth, being but twenty-four years of age."

As Mr. Howard's second wife is still living (and may it be many, many years before any one shall write her obituary), it would be out of place for me to say much. In Boston, her home, her musical talents are too well known to require comment. She will pardon me, I trust, for inserting here a published notice of her assisting, not long since, in a concert given by a local musical association in Meriden, Conn.

"The features of the Wednesday night social hour were the solos by Mrs. C. R. Howard, of Boston, and Miss Patriek, of Worcester. Mrs. Howard's voice is a clear musical high soprano, of a penetrating rather reedy quality, especially brilliant and true in upper register, and withal, finely cultivated, and under complete control. This joined with an accurate conception of the author's meaning, and accompanied by an unmistakable religious fervor, enabled the lady to produce her solos with a spirit, abandon, and true expression most delightful to every hearer. In the "Hear my prayer," by Mendelssohn, and the "Salve Maria," by Mecadante, given Thursday evening, she gained the utmost sympathy and approbation of the audience, and responded to an encore with that gem by Gatty, "When so early in the morning." Mrs. Howard, formerly known as Miss Julia Foster, of the Highlands, has always been a favorite in Boston, having been leading soprano at St. Pauls for several years, likewise a member of the celebrated Foster Club, and at the great Peace Jubilee, was in the bouquet of artists, selected to execute obligato solos in the great choruses of the masters."

On leaving school and yet quite young, Mr. Howard was apprenticed to the dry goods business, in West Meriden, Conn. When the late war of the Rebellion broke out, although not yet of full age, he enlisted for three years in the 15th Regt., Co. A, of Connecticut Volunteers, and followed the fortunes of that regiment for some two years, taking an active part in the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., and other engagements, though much of the time he was detailed on clerk duty at regimental and brigade headquarters. Before the time of his enlistment expired, he was honorably discharged from the army, and appointed Paymaster's Clerk in the Navy, where he served till the close of the war.

On returning home, he was appointed teller in the Home Nat. Bank, in West Meriden, Conn. There he remained about two years, when he resigned and went to Boston, as a clerk and book-keeper for some time. He was afterwards engaged in the sale of sewing machines, then of safes and fire-proof window-shutters in Boston. On the reorganization of the Police Department in Boston he was appointed chief clerk of the Police Commissioners, which office he subsequently resigned to accept a more responsible position, as Secretary and Treasurer of the Continental Telephone Company in Boston, which office he still (1882) holds.

George also resides with his parents. He is an assistant cashier in a bank in Kinderhook.

At the early age of ten years Mr. Howard began to "paddle his own canoe," in a measure, by piecing rolls in a small factory near his native village. He continued this and other work in a factory about five years, attending school some three months each winter. Early in 1828 he went to Boston, where he stayed about two years, a part of which time he attended a private school, kept in the old Cornhill Building. He then returned to Connecticut, and entered as an apprentice the printing-office of L. K. Dow & Co., in New Haven. After about two years service here he thought himself master of the art, and started out in the world for himself, with the usual unrest of the craft. He visited various places north and south, working at his trade for a longer or shorter time in each, till in 1838 he made a permanent stop in the city of New York. In 1841 he became foreman in the office of the Aurora, a daily morning paper, and of the Atlas, a weekly paper, published by Herrick & Ropes. In September, 1845, he bought an interest in the Sunday Times and Noah's Weekly Messenger, and was thus connected with the late Major M. M. Noah, and Mr. David Deans in its publication. The paper at that time had but a limited circulation, but by their personal care and unwearied efforts it rapidly grew in public favor, and soon became the leading journal of its class in the extent of circulation and influence, and profit to the publishers. After the death of Major Noah, in 1851, the paper was conducted by the surviving partners till 1863, when Mr. Howard gave up active personal connection with the paper to his sons, who retained their interest in it till 1874, when by sale the proprietorship passed into other hands. In politics Mr. Howard was a firm but not a scheming Democrat. In 1859 he was appointed an inspector in the New York Custom House, which office he resigned after two years service. In giving up active connection with the Sunday Times in 1863, he removed with his family to his country-seat at Kinderhook, in Columbia Co., N. Y., where they still reside.

Elizabeth Priscilla d. November, 1822, Preble, N. Y.

Martha M., their daughter, m. Oct. 12, 1854, Daniel Kelley, of Rochdale, Crawford Co., Pa., where she lived and died Mar. 13, 1875, the mother of five children.

Mr. Howard was one of the few sons of Thomas and Priscilla (40), who was not engaged in the tanning of leather, or in the making it up into boots, shoes, harness, or other articles. He was by occupation a farmer, though to a limited extent. He at least raised a crop of useful and enterprising sons, who aided him in his labors in their younger life, and cheerfully contributed to his support in his unusually protracted life of 94 years, 5 months, and 16 days. On his marriage he settled in Franklin, N. Y. In 1815 he moved to Preble, Cortland Co., N. Y., where he remained some four years, and then returned to Franklin, where he remained till 1834, when he removed to Burton, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., and subsequently to Randolph, Crawford Co., Pa. After the death of his wife he made his home with his children, chiefly with Martha, and his son Ira E., at whose house in Franklin, Pa., he died, apparently without disease, simply of old age.

Elizabeth, the eldest daughter, never married. She remained with her parents till their death, when she went to reside with her brother Aaron, and died in Leverett, Mass., March 4, 1802, much beloved for her amiable, benevolent, and Christian character.

Mareah died young.

Pegge died in Pomfret Oct. 11, 1751.

Mr. John Howard, Sr., was a tanner and currier by trade, having learned the business in Ipswich, where he carried it on for himself, as he did afterwards in Pomfret, Conn., to which place he moved between 1741 and 1747. He located, probably, some little north of the present principal street in Pomfret. The precise spot has not been traced, as the deed seems not to have been recorded. In May, 1777, he sold his lands, with dwelling, barn, shops, etc., to his son William, and soon after removed to Somers, Conn., where he died. He was buried in the North Burying-Ground, where large, red sandstone monuments mark the graves of himself and wife. He was a man of industry, integrity, and sterling worth. He united with the First Church in Pomfret, in Jan., 1758, his wife having removed her relation from the First Church in Ipswich, which she joined Dec. 27, 1741. His death occurred without warning. The sermon preached at his funeral by his pastor, Rev. Charles Backus, was afterward published by request of the family. In a note attached, the writer says, "Mr. Howard had returned from abroad into his house just before his death. After warming himself by the fire, he arose from his chair and walked towards the window in the same room, fell down in the middle of the floor, and was taken up dead. He died, probably, from the bursting of some large vessel. A sorrowful widow and seven children lament their loss of a kind husband and tender father. He was a member of the church in this place, and of a sober life. His temper was remarkable for benevolence and hospitality. All who knew him admired his faithfulness and integrity in his profession, and conduct among mankind. He was sincerely beloved by all his neighbors and acquaintances, by whom his death is much lamented."

Although his immediate family was not very large for those times, his posterity has been quite numerous as the following pages show :

Willard died in 1830 in Pomfret, Conn.

Pegge or Margaret, the eldest daughter, married a Mr. Wyman and settled in Vermont, it is said.

Molly also probably married in Vermont.

Lucinia married Abiza Smith, of Paris, Oneida Co., N. Y. She died before her parents, date not known, suddenly, while about her domestic duties.

Mr. John Howard, Jr., appears to have learned and followed the occupation of his father, though he never prospered greatly financially. He was at heart a worthy man. He and his wife united in full communion with the First Church in Pomfret, Conn., Nov. 4, 1764, and their children, born in Pomfret, were baptized there. Nov. 11, 1767, he and his wife were recommended to the church in Monson, Mass., where they resided some ten years. Four of their children were born and baptized there. They then returned to Pomfret for a time. They afterwards removed to Somers, Conn., and united with the church there by letter from the church in Monson, Aug. 6, 1787. Subsequently they are mentioned as residing in Middlebury, Vt., but soon returned to Connecticut, and about 1800 they moved to Paris, Oneida Co., N. Y., since called Sauquoit, where they passed the remaining years of their lives with their son Joseph. His name heads the list of members of the church first organized in Sauquoit.

Sally, their daughter, married Silas Smith and settled in Middlebury, Wyoming Co., N. Y. About 1840 they moved to Sardinia, in Erie Co., N. Y., and soon after to Grant Co., Wis., where they both died leaving children.

Pegge married Samuel Russell of Hartland, Vt. They settled in Wyoming Co., N. Y., but subsequently moved to Crawford Co., Pa., and died there. Lucy, their only child, married Norman Johnson of Gainesville, N. Y.

Lydia Ann married James Miller of Nunda, Livingston Co., N. Y., where they lived several years. They afterwards moved to Tecumseh, Mich., where she died, leaving four children.

Patty married Calvin Lewis of Leicester, Livingston Co., and died in China, Wyoming Co., N. Y., leaving six children.

Polly, the youngest daughter, married on June 11, 1826, Isaac Miller of Nunda, N. Y. They afterward moved to Adrian, Mich., where she died April 9, 1875, without issue.

The first record of Elisha Howard, after that of his birth and baptism in Pomfret, Conn., is in Hartland, Vt., where he seems to have resided for several years. Subsequent to 1790 he was a resident and voter in Middlebury, Vt., for some years. From there he moved to Moriah, in Essex Co., N. Y., and, about 1814, following in the wake of his son Daniel, he moved to Covington, N. Y., where he passed the remainder of his life. By occupation he was a farmer, cattle-dealer, and butcher.

EBENEZER HOWARD, s. Elisha and Patty (Williams) Howard (95), b. Aug. 20, 1784, in Hartland, Vt., and LYDIA CARTWRIGHT, were m. about 1829, in Perry, Wyoming Co., N. Y.

They afterward moved to Ohio, near Cleveland. From there they soon started for Minnesota, and had journeyed as far as Vernon Co., then called Bad Axe Co., Wis., when he sickened and died, leaving, it is believed, no children. His widow married again and continued to reside in that vicinity. If still living, her address is not known.

Mary Jane, their daughter, married on Feb. 19, 1840, Joel C. Clark, a farmer of Covington, N. Y., where they still (1880) reside. They have nine children.

Hannah married on August 13, 1839, John S. Thompson of Perry Village, Wyoming Co., N. Y. They have no children.

Mr. Howard was bred up a farmer, and passed his early years in Vermont and northern New York. In 1812 he went from Moriah in Essex Co., N. Y., to that part of the Genesee Valley now Covington, Wyoming Co., N. Y., then heavily wooded, uncultivated, and sparsely inhabited. He purchased a portion of this wilderness land and here commenced active life for himself. In the course of a year he had made a small clearing, got in some seed for a crop of wheat, and erected the inevitable log hut. He then returned to Moriah and was married, as recorded above. In February following he took his wife and such household goods as she had gathered by her industry and economy, in a rude sleigh, and, undismayed by the cold, the snow, the storms, and the unbroken pathways, they urged their way to their new home. Here they toiled together and reared their children till the "wilderness blossomed as the rose." We laud the energy and endurance under trials and privations of the early settlers at Plymouth; but no less praise is due to pilgrims like these, who braved the winters cold, the scanty provisions, and the lack of social and religious privileges. A change in all these respects was early initiated. Their limited home became a resting-place for the weary traveler, the hospitable abode for the itinerant clergy, and the meeting-house for Sabbath worship. "Martha was cumbered with much serving," but she had also chosen that good part which has never been taken from her. She not only provided well for her own household, but her skillful shears and needle fashioned all the garments for the men for many miles around. And now (1881), after a life of ninety years of labor, her hand has not lost its cunning, nor her spirit its industry. Still in the enjoyment of bodily health, and in the possession of all her senses, she is busy with her needle, preparing specimens of her handiwork as mementoes for her grandchildren. Who can number the blessings such a woman, such a wife and mother, has conferred upon the world. And now, as she looks off from her pinnacle of age, what a retrospect is hers! and what a prospect!

Eliza C., his eldest daughter, married on Nov. 25, 1868, in Buffalo, N. Y., Wallace J. Pelton of Covington, N. Y., where they have continued to reside upon the farm where he was born.

Martha S. married on March 5, 1875, in Buffalo, N. Y., Rollin L. Rice of Pentwater, Mich., a lawyer by profession. He settled in practice in Whitehall, Muskegon Co., Mich.

Mr. Austin A. Howard was a lawyer by profession. He graduated at Williams College in July, 1839. Soon after he commenced the study of law with Judge John B. Skinner, in Wyoming, in Wyoming Co., N. Y., at the same time teaching in the academy there, where he had pursued his studies preparatory for college. Having remained here about two years, he went to Buffalo and entered the law office of Gen. H. B. Potter, with whom he was subsequently associated for several years as a partner. At a later period he devoted himself principally to office work and real-estate transactions. The members of the Buffalo bar, at a meeting in honor of his memory, bear testimony to his industry and to his faithfulness to his clients; that he was a valued and true friend, eminently sensible, sound in judgment, kind and affectionate in disposition, and a public-spirited citizen; that he was a man of refined literary taste and culture; that in social life he stood high and was a gentleman of the old school; that in his domestic relations he was best known and beloved; that he was fond and indulgent as a husband and father, and, as a son, he cherished to the very close of his life a tender regard for his mother, who survives him. He never made a public profession of religion, but ever manifested his interest in religious things by a constant and devout attendance upon public worship, and, during his long and severe illness, which ended his days, he showed himself a firm believer in Jesus as the Saviour of sinners, and held to that trust with increasing confidence to the last. His widow and her children reside in Buffalo, N. Y.

Martha J. married on Jan. 4, 1852, in Franklin, Wis., Joseph Anderson. They reside at Fort Worth, in Texas. Capt. Anderson is a farmer and extensive stock raiser and dealer.

Helen E., the youngest daughter, married on Sept. 2, 1861, in Franklin, Wis., Willis Vennor Tickenor of Milwaukee, Wis. He is a lawyer by profession. He has since settled in practice in Mason City, Ia. They have one son and one daughter.

George W. was in the Union army in the late Rebellion. He enlisted Aug. 21, 1862, in Co. G, Twenty-eighth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers. He served till Feb. 22, 1863, when he died in Helena, Ark.

Mr. John W. Howard seems to have inherited and early developed the elements of a successful pioneer. After assisting his father for a few years in Covington and vicinity, on the 15th of Oct., 1817, he took his wife and infant son, with a horse team, and traveled westward along the southern shore of Lake Erie. A journey of six weeks brought him to Huron, in Huron Co., O. Here and in the vicinity he remained till Jan., 1835, when he moved on to Laporte, Ind. He made only a short stop here. On May 2, 1836, again, with his horse team and increased family, he pushed on to what is now Franklin, Milwaukee Co., Wis. This country was then a wild prairie and not yet surveyed by the government. It was named from him Howard's prairie, and is still known by that name. Here he lived and labored till 1857, when he moved to Waukesha, in the same county, where he died as stated above.

The foregoing record and brief sketch clearly indicate the leading traits of Mr. Howard's character. When we call to mind the condition of that part of the country at that time, the long stretches of unbroken forests, the lack of roads and facilities for travel, the sparsity of civilized people, and the number of the red men, and the various other obstacles to be overcome, we can form some idea of the enterprise and energy, the endurance and perseverance needed to prosecute such a journey, support such a family, and provide for it and others even limited means for intellectual and religious instruction. In these objects, it is said, he took a deep interest at once and while he remained in Franklin. He contributed liberally of his money and of personal efforts to establish these, and, like his brother Daniel in Covington, his house served as a home, a church, and a school-house, he also often paying both the preacher and the teacher. He lived to see the seeds he thus planted in this new country grow up into an abundant harvest of good. In life he was greatly respected and his death was deeply regretted.

Mr. Freeman Howard was a carriage-maker by trade, having learned the business of a Mr. Wells of Hartford. Some months before reaching his majority he entered into partnership with his employer. Their business was mostly with the South. Early in 1812 they shipped a number of carriages to South Carolina, about the time the second war with England was declared, and the embargo was laid. Their venture in consequence proved a disastrous one, involving a loss to the firm of their entire capital and some three thousand dollars besides. This debt, however, it is said was afterwards honorably paid. In the autumn of 1814, as the records show, Mr.
Howard bought a property in Berlin, Conn., and established a carriage-making business there. He seems to have continued there until the spring of 1818, when he moved to Cole-brook, Conn., where he bought a farm, saw-mill, etc., which he improved during the succeeding ten years. In 1828 he moved to Ohio, and settled in Aurora, in Portage Co., on a farm of one hundred acres, with a water privilege, mills, etc.
After residing there about eight years he sold this property and purchased a smaller one, but having a much greater water power. On this he erected a large flouring-mill, saw-mill, and clothing works. Some two years later these mills were destroyed by fire. He erected others on the same site, some of which were swept away by the great freshet, so called. The others are still standing and are known as the Howard mills. The later years of his rather eventful life he passed with his son, Julius F., at whose house both he and his wife died.

Eunice M., their only daughter, m. Oct. 24, 1875, Eugene Witter of Chardon, Geauga Co., Ohio, where they reside. They have no children.

Mr. Julius F. Howard, like his brother, Chester R., remained at home in aid of his father till after his marriage. In 1846 he moved to Wayne, in Ashtabula Co., O., on to a new and uncultivated farm, which he cleared and occupied for fourteen years, except one year, 1852, which he spent in Kentucky with his father in building a mill for other parties. In 1860 he sold his farm in Wayne, and purchased one in Auburn, Geauga Co. Five years later he sold this and purchased another in Chardon in the same county, where he has since resided, managing his farm, and also a large cattle ranch he owns in Missouri. He has never attained to public life, although his name has been on the county ticket for auditor, sheriff, etc., probably because of his lack of sympathy with the strong anti-slavery, free soil, and republican sentiment of northern Ohio.

ANNE,	b. May 17, 1802,	"	" "

Roxana, their eldest daughter, m. June 30, 1809, Moses Gray of Templeton, Mass. She became the mother of eight children. Her eldest is Prof. Asa Gray of Harvard College, one of the most eminent of American scientists, and the foremost botanist the country has produced. Abroad, also, his name and writings are equally well known and appreciated by scientific men. Her youngest son is a prominent lawyer in the city of New York. She is spoken of as being a true gentlewoman, of a lovely, noble character, and those who lived with her longest and knew her best, remember no indiscreet words escaping from her lips. She died in Sauquoit June 10, 1868.

Jillany, the second daughter, married in Sauquoit Nov. 22, 1812, William Manning Drake. She had seven children, all born in Sauquoit, where she died May 25, 1876. "Aunt Drake," as she was familiarly called, is said to have been a woman of surpassing energy and ingenuity in all manner of pursuits indoors and outdoors, millinery or carpenter work, and could do them all well.

Polly, the third daughter, married in 1827 Stephen Melvin of Otsego, N. Y. She died there March 1, 1843.

Anne, the fourth and youngest daughter, married Feb. 24, 1829, Reuben Wallace of Franconia, N. H. In 1865 they moved from Franconia to Clarence in Missouri, where she died Oct. 17, 1876.

The mother, Submit, it is said was for many years before her death a great sufferer from asthma, a sad legacy she transmitted to several of her posterity.

Mr. Howard married in 1833, for his second wife, MARGARET CARSON, who was b. in Sauquoit in 1777, and d. there Sept. 8, 1850, of accidental poisoning. There were no children by this marriage.

At the time of his first marriage Mr. Howard was living in Longmeadow, Mass., a farmer, or as designated in several deeds, a yeoman. In 1793, with his wife and three young children, he moved to the township of Paris, in Oneida Co., N. Y., and located in or near what is now called Sauquoit. This was at that time a frontier settlement, having been set off as a township only the year before, and containing, it is said, only six families. From the accounts we have of him, Mr. Howard seems to have possessed many natural endowments which fitted him for the arduous and progressive work of a pioneer. Physically he was tall, robust, athletic, and commanding. Mentally he could foresee the wants of an infant colony, and devise means to supply them. Hence he was ever foremost in establishing schools and accommodations for religious worship. He was active and influential in organizing a Presbyterian church there a few years later, and his name stands second on the roll of membership, his aged father alone taking precedence. He was elected its first deacon, and he served in that capacity or as an elder to the close of his life, a period of nearly forty years. His influence for good under such circumstances can hardly be measured or appreciated at the present time. His memory is held in great respect by all who knew him. One who saw him when he was quite advanced in life portrays him thus: "His venerable appearance will never be effaced from my memory. He was about six feet in height, of a large, portly figure, and ruddy complexion. He seemed to me in my youth, and as I now look back in my maturer years, a model of all that is good in human character. He was a devoted Christian, and in all business affairs he seemed to be governed by the strictest integrity. He was an affectionate father and grandfather, a kind, obliging neighbor, and a warm-hearted friend."

He last lived and died in the house now owned and occupied by Mrs. Stillman Montague, in Sauquoit. His remains and those of his two wives, and of his father and mother, rest in the family burying-place, lots 1 and 2 in section 3 in the cemetery in Sauquoit.

Julia Anna, Nov. 25, 1851, in Aurora, N. Y.

Mr. Howard continued his residence in Sauquoit and vicinity until 1836, when he removed to Aurora, Erie Co., N. Y., where he died. He is represented by those who knew him as a man possessed of many good qualities; as being strictly honest in all his business relations; as having a clear and vigorous mind, so that his advice was often sought in important business transactions; that he was public spirited and ready to labor for the benefit of others, even to the second and third generation. He was kind-hearted and charitable even beyond his present pecuniary ability, and would use his credit to procure assistance for some needy one. He is also said to have been a shrewd detective, and was often employed in that service, and he seldom failed to secure his man and evidence sufficient to convict him. He experienced financially the ups and downs of life, especially the downs. At one time he invested all his means in building a plank road called the Reservation Central, expecting to derive from it an annual income that would support him through life. But he found when the road was built, as many other individuals and corporations have found, that the expense of keeping the road in repair absorbed all the receipts, and the money invested was lost. He died of paralysis, and died poor.

Nancy A., his eldest daughter, married Joseph Henry of Gowanda, N. Y., where she died October 4, 1837, leaving one son, Joseph Henry, Jr.

Cornelia, married November 12, 1834, Hiram Bailey of Sauquoit. She died Aug. 30, 1850, and left several children.

Peace Submit, married March 25, 1848, Orville Titus of Hamburg, N. Y. She is still living in Buffalo, N. Y.

Rebecca E., married October 15, 1855, Joseph F. Pond of Aurora, N. Y., where she died November 13, 1856, and is remembered as a very lovely and amiable woman, never known, it is said, to be angry. Her sudden death was deeply mourned by all her acquaintances.

 WALTER THOMAS (127), b. May 7, 1852, in Geneseo, Liv. Co., N. Y.

Mr. Henry W. Howard was in early life a teacher and surveyor. But he devoted his later life to farming. A friend writing of him says: "Henry Walter won the love of all who knew him intimately. He was energetic and honorable, and a living proof that by economy and persevering industry a man may succeed in life, though he be honest. At the time of his death he owned one of the nicest and now one of the most valuable farms in Erie Co. His death was deeply felt by the community at large, and by the church. To his family and friends his death was irreparable."

Lydia Ann, married January 9, 1842, William Bowie of Aurora. She was the mother of nine children. She died April 17, 1864, in Aurora.

Anne Mary, married William Aldrich, a native of Greenfield, N. Y. They reside in Chicago, Ill. He is a wholesale merchant there and a prominent man.

Julia Grace, married January 29, 1850, Nathan A. Turner of Aurora, N. Y., where they still reside, 1880.

James Sylvester is unmarried, a farmer, resides in Big Grove, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa.

Mrs. Joseph Howard was usually and affectionately called by her second name Beata, signifying "the happy." It was a very appropriate name, for she was always happy herself and made those around her happy also. She will be long remembered for her gentle, refined manners, and her charming hospitality. She also sang very sweetly, it is said, and retained this accomplishment till her decease. She died at the house of her daughter Lucy in Holland, Erie Co., N. Y.

Joseph Howard, Jr., was a merchant, and his business career was a successful one. In 1817 he commenced selling goods in Sheldon, Wyoming Co., N. Y., for Judge Sanger of New Hartford, Oneida Co., N. Y. On taking an account of stock at the end of the first year, the profits were found to be much larger than was anticipated. This result so pleased Judge Sanger that he made him a valuable present, and continued him in the business, and furnished him for a time with goods at cost. This assistance, with a few hundred dollars he received from his father, enabled him to build up a large and lucrative business there, and afterwards in Aurora, Erie Co., N. Y., where he established himself in 1820, and where he died, having accumulated a comfortable fortune. A local paper dated the day he was buried has the following obituary, viz. : "More than a passing notice is due the memory of the deceased. The influence of his character while living was felt by all to be that of a prudent, honest, and good man. Mr. Howard resided in this place more than sixteen years, and prospered in business. But his prosperity did not freeze his soul, it rather expanded it. He took industrious and honest young men by the hand, pointed out the way, and furnished the means of obtaining a competency. Many there are of that class to whom he was a father. The poor received largely of his bounty, but he made no ostentation of his charity. He sought out the sick and afflicted, and unsparingly administered relief. He was emphatically a public-spirited man. He did all in his power to build up the place, and contributed money liberally to advance its financial prosperity and its moral and intellectual growth. Our academy was founded chiefly by his exertions, and has since received his warm and efficient support. A large concourse of people attended his funeral, and every countenance bespoke the loss they felt, and their respect for the dead."

Mr. Joseph B. Howard has resided for several years past in Chicago, Ill. He is in the employment of the general government and connected with the post-office in that city.

Sidney Herbert, their eldest son, when about three years of age suffered from a long and severe attack of scarlet fever, which deprived him of both speech and hearing. He was educated at the Institute for the Deaf and Dumb in New York City, whence he graduated in 1873, with the highest honors of his class. His valedictory address was read by the principal of the Institute, being translated at the same time by the writer himself, for the benefit of the pupils, into their language. He has since been a teacher in the deaf and dumb institute at Flint, Michigan, which is his present address.

William Aldrich, his brother, married Ella Adelaide Hosford, the daughter of John H. and Louisa Hosford, born in April, 1855. They have one daughter named Alice Louise, born on Feb. 18, 1883, in Rochelle, Ill., where her father is a practicing physician.

The other four children are unmarried, and reside with their parents in Chicago. Frank Arthur is engaged in the drug business.

Mr. Smith Howard was a farmer by occupation. His name appears as both grantee and grantor in Register of Deeds in Somers, Conn., in 1793, and earlier. Soon after that date he settled in Paris, Oneida Co., N. Y., in that part since known as Sauquoit, where he continued to reside till the year 1831, when he moved to York, Washtenaw Co., Mich. About ten years later he moved to Bennington, Shiawassee Co., Mich., where he passed the remaining years of his life in the vicinity of three of his sons. He is remembered as a valued citizen, always ready to speak a good word and assist in the advancement of every good work.

Of his daughters we only know that Lucy married Palmer Crumb and moved to Rock Prairie, Rock Co., Wis.

Betsey C. married William Austin of Babcock Hill, Oneida Co., N. Y. They resided in Paris Hill, in the same county, where she died January 21, 1882.

Rhoda, the twin sister of Rufus, married David B. Woods, and settled in Milton, Rock Co., Wis.

Soon after his marriage Mr. Howard moved from Oneida Co., N. Y., and settled in Bennington, Shiawassee Co., Mich., where he took up a fine section of farming land, which he divided up with his three brothers, Ira B., Jerry, and John A., retaining, however, a larger share for his own use. Here he passed the remainder of his long, useful, and prosperous life. The property still remains, for the most part, in the hands of the original owners or their immediate descendants.

Betsy Ann, their second daughter, married Renben Sawtell of Fenwick, Mich., who has since purchased the old homestead of one of the brothers, and on this they now reside.

Eunice C., their eldest daughter, married on March 13, 1856, Peter H. Smith, and resides in Bennington.

Martha Jane, died April 5, 1858.

George Babbitt, died March 20, 1845, and Mary Emily, died January 2, 1851, all in Bennington.

Minerva Rebecca, their only child, was b. Nov. 17, 1861, in Bennington, Mich.

From early life Mr. H. C. Howard has followed farming as an occupation and on a portion of the land originally purchased by his father in Bennington, where he now resides. By industry and care he has prospered financially, and by his liberality and public spirit he has been of much service to the community about him, a support to its schools and religious privileges, especially in its service of song, having taken a leading part in that department of public worship for several years, as also as superintendent in the Sabbath-school. Although connected immediately with the M. E. Church, his labor of love has not been limited to that communion. His sickle is ever ready for any field that is white for the harvest. He has held the office of a Justice of the Peace for eight years, and as a citizen, he is highly esteemed by all who are acquainted with him.

Mr. A. M. Howard has also been engaged in farming from early life. He has owned and occupied the old homestead in Bennington till quite recently, when he sold it to Mr. Sawtell his brother-in-law, and moved his family to Lansing, where are superior facilities for educating his children. His removal is regarded as a loss to Bennington of a worthy, active, christian citizen. As his father, grandfather, and earlier ancestors had been, Mr. Howard was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and contributed of his means and influence to its support. A few years since, that society, although limited in numbers and wealth, erected a commodious church edifice. In this enterprise he took a deep, personal interest, as is shown by the following extract from a letter recently received from a leading citizen of that place. "I think it was through Mr. Albert M. Howard's determined zeal and untiring efforts that the church edifice stands to-day, and although he has moved away and may seldom or never again worship within its holy walls, yet it will be a monument to his memory while it stands."

William M. and Elizabeth A., younger children by the third marriage, live in Vandalia, Ill.

Ida Louisa died young.

Wilber J., their eldest son, has never married. He commenced his business life while quite young as a salesman in a dry goods house in Madison, Wis., for several years. Afterwards he was in the same business in Lansing, Mich. He subsequently received an appointment in the land office there under Gov. Wilson, where he continued four years. On the breaking out of the Rebellion he enlisted in Co. B, 2d Reg't, Burden's U. S. Sharp Shooters, on the 4th of Oct., 1861, and served in the army for four and a half years, taking part in twenty-four general engagements, and some forty skirmishes. At Antietam he was shot through the leg, which laid him up in hospital for five months. He was also wounded at Spottsylvania and again at Gettysburg. When mustered out of service he was first lieutenant of his company. On his return from the war, he went into the oil business for a time, with the usual fortune of gain and loss incident to that business. He then went to Detroit, Mich., and soon got an appointment in the custom-house there, where he has since remained. For some years past he has been a deputy collector and superintendent of customs.

Mr. Mason M. Howard was a farmer by occupation, but was too unsettled in life to be greatly prosperous. For some years past his home has been with his son Adelbert.

Catherine Ann, their daughter, married in Nov. 1866, H. W. Stutson, of Cottage Grove, Wis., who served as a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, and died in April, 1870, of wounds received in battle. He is spoken of as a very estimable and exemplary man. He left one son, born Oct., 1867. She died March 15, 1872.

Jennie E., their youngest daughter, married in Aug., 1878, Jesse Blakesley of San Francisco, Cal. They have since settled in Skokomish, in Washington Territory, and are engaged in teaching the Indians there.

Olive P., died Aug. 23, 1843, and the daughter died Jan. 27, 1849, in Cottage Grove.

Dr. Rufus Howard studied for a homeopathic physician, and commenced to practice in Cottage Grove, Dane Co., Wis., in 1846. After a year or two he concluded to change to the old school of allopathy. To this end he entered Geneva College, and in due time received a diploma from that institution and settled again in his former field of labor. He was quite successful in his treatment of cases, and soon built up an extensive business, too extensive in fact for his physical constitution, as from overwork and frequent exposure, it is thought, he at length brought upon himself a quick consumption, and died after an illness of only seven days. He was a man of much energy and activity, and greatly esteemed as a citizen. He was also for a time a prominent member of the Presbyterian Church there. But the change in his practice as a physician perhaps, and especially in his adopting certain spiritualistic views on religion somewhat in advance of the times, and which did not secure the sympathy of the members generally, and his standing with characteristic firmness by his convictions, all tended in his later life to disturb his own peace of mind, and to interrupt in some degree his usefulness and his friendly relations with many of the religious people of the place.

Mr. Howard is a farmer by occupation. In the war of the Rebellion he did efficient service in the Union army, and experienced his share of its vicissitudes. In August, 1861, he enlisted in the Third Wisconsin Battery of Light Infantry, and served till the battery was discharged in October, 1864. At the battle of Chickamauga he was captured with the entire battery, except one gun and eight men, and taken a prisoner to Richmond, Va. On November 29, 1863, he was removed to Danville, Va., whence he escaped in company with many other prisoners the following evening. After some twenty-eight days' travel and severe suffering he reached the Federal lines at Fayette, West Va. After recruiting a week or so he received a furlough home, but rejoined the battery in February, 1864, and remained with it till it was discharged in October following. On his marriage he settled in Dane Co., Wis., where he remained till October, 1874, when he removed to Floyd, in Floyd Co., Iowa. His present residence is Charles City, Iowa. Since his settlement in Iowa he has patented, and been extensively engaged in manufacturing an adjustable harrow, the sale of which extends into many of the Western States, and is rapidly increasing. He seems to possess a genius for inventing and improving machinery for preparing the soil, planting the seed, and cultivating agricultural crops, and as a general business manager he possesses great energy, fidelity, and tact.

Washington P., his brother, is unmarried. He is employed as a foreman in the harrow works referred to above.

David Scott, and Ray Strong, his sons, died young.

Edith Annette, was accidentally shot by a child July 29, 1878, in Floyd, Iowa.

Philena, their eldest daughter, married on May 5, 1848, William Richards, a farmer and prominent citizen of Chardon, Geauga Co., Ohio, where they lived several years. They have since settled in Auburn, in the same county, their present residence.

Martha, their other daughter, married on Aug. 11, 1869, Delvan L. Fenkell of Bainbridge, and died there Aug. 28, 1880, without issue.

The enterprising traits in William R. Howard's character early developed themselves. In 1818, in company with a companion, both unmarried, he pushed off from Berkshire Co., Mass., for Ohio on foot, and worked till the death of his father, the last of the following year, when he returned to Washington by the same conveyance that took him away; settled his father's estate, married, and on the 3d July, 1821, with his wife, his mother, brother, and three sisters returned to his farm in Bainbridge. He soon became one of the most prominent citizens of that place. For four years, 1828 to 1832, he was a member of the Board of Trustees of that township. In 1840 he was elected a Justice of the Peace, which office he filled very creditably for three terms, of three years each. He was an active Christain man, and a member of the M. E. Church for many years before his death. It is a coincidence worthy of notice that the birth of Mr. Howard and of his wife occurred on the same day, and it is said within two hours of each other.

William Howard was bred up a farmer, and followed that occupation in his native township till the age of forty-three. He owns the farm his father first purchased and cultivated when he came from Berkshire Co., Mass., to Ohio in 1818. The regard in which he is held by the citizens of his township and county is shown in some degree by the offices he has held. At the age of twenty-eight he was elected township clerk, and served as such for four years. He was then elected one of the Trustees of Bainbridge, and reelected after a term of two years. At the age of thirty-six he was elected a Justice of the Peace, and was holding the office for a third term, when in October, 1877, he was elected Auditor of Geauga Co., which office he is now, 1882, holding for a second term of three years. His office and present residence is in Chardon, Geauga Co., Ohio.

Martha, their da., married on Feb. 1, 1795, in Sharon, Vt., Jesse Ames of Fairlee, Vt., where they settled and lived till 1806, when they moved to Royalton, Vt. They resided here till 1850. They then moved to Mount Morris, in Livingston Co., N. Y., where she died on Jan. 26, 1859. She was the mother of nine children, all of whom, as also her husband, survived her.

Mr. Thomas Howard passed his early years in Pomfret, Conn., assisting his father in his tanning and farming business. On his marriage, if not before, he settled in Monson, Mass. How long he continued to reside there, and in the other places afterwards named, is only approximately known by his church relations.

On Dec. 14, 1777, he and his wife were received into the Congregational Church in Somers, Conn., by letters from the church in Monson. When they united with this latter church is not known. The early records of the church in Monson are lost. On Oct. 5, 1780, they took letters from the church in Somers to the church in Lebanon, N. H., where their names are found enrolled. They subsequently moved to Sharon, Vt., where they both died as stated above. Of his pursuits in life, and of his standing and influence as a citizen, little is now known. That he was an upright Christian man is readily inferred from the foregoing particulars.

Mr. Aaron Howard was a farmer by occupation. He remained in Sharon, Vt., after his marriage about fourteen years, and seems to have been a prominent man in the place, and much respected. He held the office of Town Clerk, and other local offices in the town and church. In the spring of 1812 he sold his farm in Sharon, and purposed to move to Genesee Co., N. Y. But the commencement of the war with England delayed and somewhat embarrassed his plans for a time. In November of that year he left Vermont with his family, and pushed westward as far as Cayuga Co., N. Y., and settled in the town of Scipio, where he remained till February, 1817, when he moved to Hamburg in Erie Co., N. Y., where he died in April the following year, leaving his wife and eight children to mourn his decease.

Almira E. m. Dec. 12, 1864, Edward Ingersoll of East Evans, Erie Co., N. Y., where they continue to reside (1881). They have three children.

Mr. D. H. Howard was by trade a mason. He worked in Hamburg, N. Y., and vicinity till 1834, when he moved to Buffalo, N. Y. Here he was engaged as a contractor and builder for two years. In 1836 he moved to St. Charles, in Kane Co., Ill., and bought a part of the lot now owned by N. T. Roche, and built a house thereon the same year. The county was then in its infancy, the first settlers having come there about four years previously, at the close of the Black Hawk War. He at once took an active part in public affairs. He was at the first election held in the county, June 6, 1836, served as constable for five years, and had charge of the first grand jury that convened in the county. There then being no court-house nor other room suitable for the purpose, the jury assembled for deliberation in the shade of a large tree on the bank of the Fox River. In 1843 he moved from St. Charles to Geneva, the county-seat in the same county, and thence in 1847 to Chicago, Ill., where he resided some twenty-five years, and filled various offices of trust and responsibility. He was employed by the U. S. Government to superintend the erection of a marine hospital and light-house. For twelve years he was employed by the city authorities as inspector of mason work in Chicago. In 1855 he was appointed collector of taxes in the West End, so called, in Chicago, under bonds amounting to $180,000. All these and other offices he discharged to the satisfaction of the authorities and of his bondsmen. Having become incapacitated for manual labor, he returned to St. Charles in 1873, and four years later he made his home with his eldest daughter in Geneva, where he closed his honorable and useful life.

As an occupation Mr. Howard has followed somewhat in the footsteps of his father. Since the age of twenty-two he has been employed as a superintendent in the erection of private and public buildings in Chicago, and as foreman of mason work on railroads. For the past twelve years he has been thus employed in the service of the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy R. R. Company. His home is in Geneva, Kane Co., Ill.

Mr. E. R. Howard was also a mason by trade. On his marriage he settled in Cincinnati, O., and was in the employ of the city for several years. He then moved to Chicago, Ill., and subsequently to Kansas City. His present address is Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

The patriotism and public spirit of Mr. William H. Howard manifested itself quite early in life. On May 24, 1861, when he was only fourteen years of age, he enlisted in the 13th Illinois Infantry, Co. I, for three years, or during the Rebellion. He served as a drummer-boy till June 21, 1864, when he received an honorable discharge. The next three years he spent in Cincinnati, learning the trade of a bricklayer. He then returned to Chicago, and was employed by firms of contractors and builders as a superintendent of their work. After his marriage he went into business for himself, and put up quite a number of prominent buildings in Chicago. He afterward moved to Starkville, Miss., where he has continued to reside. He superintended the erection of the Agricultural and Mechanical College buildings and the courthouse in that place, and has also been engaged on other public buildings in different parts of that State.

Of these fourteen children several have died young, viz.: George P., on Feb. 18, 1834, in Buffalo; Edgar, on May 24, 1835, also in Buffalo; Walter H., on Aug. 9, 1857; Caroline, on July 26, 1845; Leonard Jr., on Nov. 21, 1849; Emma, on Aug. 19, 1855. The latter four died in St. Charles, Ill.

Sarah A., the eldest daughter, married Jan. 27, 1848, George C. Bunker of Geneva, Kane Co., Ill. Her husband was a veteran of the Mexican war, and also served in the Union army in the late Rebellion. He died in St. Charles in 1868, where she still resides.

Celia Maria, married on Sept. 12, 1857, George Henry Wheeler of St. Charles, a farmer by occupation. They now reside in Richland, Rice Co., Minn. She is the mother of thirteen children.

Julia H., married on Jan. 31, 1864, Orris Addison Bishop, who is a machinist by trade, and resides in Chicago. They have five children. Mr. Bishop was a member of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry, and served four years in the late war against the Rebellion.

Permelia M., married on May 26, 1874, Theodore D. Kayner, a printer by trade. They settled immediately on their marriage in Chicago, Ill., and made that their home till her death. She died on Jan. 11, 1883, in St. Charles, in the room where she was born and also married. She was on a temporary visit to her father's house. "She was a strong believer in the doctrines of modern spiritualism, and died firm in the faith of better and higher life hereafter."

Florence resides with her parents. She is unmarried.

There is a little romance connected with the early life of Mrs. Caroline E. Howard which is worthy of notice as illustrative of certain traits of character as well as of the hardship of the pioneer settlers of even western New York. Her mother, it seems, died when she was only six months old, and her father died soon after. The following year her oldest brother was drafted into the army. As there was no one left capable of taking care of his little sister he carried her in his arms to an aunt, who resided in Canandaigua, N. Y., a distance of over one hundred miles, and much of the way through a dense wilderness. The aunt soon after gave her to a Mrs. Groesbeck, who subsequently moved with her husband to the city of New York, and for twelve years Caroline neither saw nor heard anything of her brothers or sisters, and then by mere accident. Mrs. Groesbeck, afterwards Mrs. Buttrick, proved a kind mother to the child, and years afterwards received a reward in kindness in return, and she passed the later years of her widowed life in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Howard, and died at their house on Feb. 12, 1871, her birthday, aged seventy-six years.

Mr. Leonard Howard, after the death of his father, at the age of fourteen was apprenticed to Theodore Coburn of Buffalo, N. Y., to learn the trade of a bricklayer, and served seven years. On his marriage he commenced business for himself in Buffalo as a contractor and builder. He set the first cutstone fronts ever set in Buffalo, in stores there, for Townsend & Coit, on the corner of Swan and Main streets. He also worked on the first building erected in the city of Dunkirk, N. Y. In 1836 he moved to Chicago, Ill., where he remained about a year, and worked on the first stone-front stores built in Chicago, on the corner of South Clark and Water streets, for Hammond & Loomis. The following year, 1837, he pushed on with his family to St. Charles, in Kane Co., Ill., where he has since made his home, engaged in building and hotel-keeping, and for eight years he was employed on a railroad. He has always occupied a high position in the public estimation, and has filled many responsible local offices. The first vote he cast for president was for John Quincy Adams, in 1828, and all his subsequent votes have been politically in accordance with that vote. In 1839 he was elected a Justice of the Peace. In 1842 he was elected a Probate Justice. In 1848 he was appointed Deputy Sheriff for two years. For many years, by repeated elections, he held the office of Township Assessor, and also that of Township Trustee and Director of Public Schools, etc. The duties of all these offices he discharged with ability and the approval of the public. Having settled there when St. Charles was an infant township, he can now, in the maturity of his age, as he reviews its growth and prosperity, say, as did one of old under similar circumstances: "A great part of these things, I am." He is also to be congratulated that while during his long, industrious, and useful life he has as a mechanic erected many valuable dwellings, he has also, as the father of a numerous, old-times family, created a growing market for such tenements, for the use of his children and children's children.

Since the foregoing was sent to the printer, the sad intelligence has been received that Mr. Leonard Howard died at his home in St. Charles, Ill., on the evening of Feb. 21, 1884. The paper adds, "He had not an enemy, and was mourned by all who were acquainted with his record."

CHARLES BOURN, b. Aug. 27, 1858, in Galena, "

Clifton, d. Aug., 1856, in Amboy, Ill.

Charles B. is an agent for Hubbard, Spencer & Co., in Chicago.

Mr. Howard was temporarily visiting his parents in St. Charles, Ill., when he was taken down with the small-pox, and notwithstanding the best medical aid and the unremitting attention of his eldest sister, Mrs. George C. Bunker, and other friends, who watched by his bedside and nursed him from the first development of the disease, his physical system soon succumbed, and he calmly breathed his last. The following is an extract copied from an obituary notice of him published in a local paper at the time of his decease:

"He was a remarkably intelligent boy, and developed great executive ability in later life. He was an active railroad man for many years, having entered the service of the Illinois Central Railroad Company at Freeport in 1854. Subsequently he was transferred to Amboy, and later to Gelena as freight agent. He was next employed by the Hannibal & St. Joseph R. R. as loss and damage agent, with headquarters at St. Joseph, Mo., where he adjusted and settled claims for the company. During the war of the Rebellion the company formed of its employees a military battalion, in which he took an active part. An incident of those perilous times will illustrate his character: At a certain period the Missouri rebels understood that the railroad company had a quantity of arms and munitions of war stored in one of their warehouses. A detachment of soldiers was sent to search for them. As they entered the warehouse Mr. Howard was sitting on a keg of powder smoking a cigar. He told them coolly to leave the premises or he would fire the keg. They left without ceremony. He was also in the employ of the Kansas & Texas and the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific companies, being with the last-named at the time of his last sickness."

Nellie M. and Marion E., the other daughters, it is believed are unmarried, and reside with their parents.

Noah S., their son, died in Camp Butler, Ill., Feb. 17, 1864. He was a drummer-boy in Company E., 89th Regiment, Illinois Volunteers.

Henry, Charles, and Thomas J. died young.

During the greater part of his active life Capt. Lorrin T. Howard has been employed as superintendent of mason work and bridge-building on railroads. Besides having charge of many other extensive jobs of bridge work in the western part of Illinois, he was the overseer in building the railroad bridge across the Mississippi River at Burlington, Iowa, a bridge 2333 feet in length. In 1874 he built by contract the Coulter Opera House, in Aurora, Ill. He is still actively engaged in his favorite pursuit, in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy R. R. Company. His works sufficiently attest his integrity, industry, and skill. His home is in Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

Mr. E. B. Howard is a mason by trade, having learned that business in his native place, and followed it there and in the vicinity till the war of the Rebellion. In 1862 he enlisted in Company E., 89th Regiment Ill. Volunteer Infantry, was promoted to the office of principal musician, and served till the close of the war. In 1866 he moved to Omaha, Neb., where he carried on business as a contractor and builder, erecting some of the finest buildings in that city, among which was the High School building. In May, 1872, he returned to Chicago, Ill., and for the succeeding ten years was equally prominent there as a builder. In May, 1882, he moved to Kansas City, Mo., where, under the firm name of Sibley Brothers & Howard, he has been largely engaged in building and brick-making. Since the war he has been quite prominent in military matters, having been Commander of several G. A. R. Posts, and is now, 1883, senior Vice-Commander of Farragut Post, No. 3, Department of Missouri.

Mr. Howard by trade was a carpenter, builder, and wheelwright, having learned the business in Amherst, Mass. After his marriage he settled in Leverett, a little east of the village, on a farm adjoining his brother Aaron's, where he resided till his death, which was the result of an accident. He was thrown from a carriage and instantly killed. He was greatly respected for his exemplary and Christian life. He was a deacon of the church there for several years, being elected in November, 1803, and held the office at the time of his death. Though childless himself he is said to have brought up a large family of boys by adopting them successively and teaching them his trade, and starting them in business for themselves, and also instilling into their minds the principles and duties essential to success in life.

Betsey, their daughter, was twice married. The record, however, has not been found, further than the name, first, to a Mr. Bartlett of Litchfield, N. Y.; second, to a Mr. Guild of the same place. She died in Bridgewater, Oneida Co., N. Y.

Hannah died in Warren, Mass., June 7, 1779.

Zilpah m. Oct. 8, 1801, Timothy Snow of Litchfield, N. Y. She died there Dec. 9, 1861.

Persis married Daniel Heald of Litchfield, N. Y. They moved to Illinois, where she died Sept. 7, 1842.

Lois married Erastus Gates of Litchfield, and died in Michigan, date not known.

Jeremiah, their son, died in Litchfield, Oct. 24, 1862. He never married.

Mr. Howard followed farming as an occupation. We gather few incidents of his history, except as suggested by the above record. How early he left Pomfret, Conn., for Brimfield, Mass., does not appear, nor just how long he continued there. In 1777 we find him in Western, in Worcester Co., Mass., which name was changed in 1834 to Warren, in honor of Gen. Joseph Warren, who fell in the battle of Bunker Hill. In 1792 he bought a farm, with dwelling-house, blacksmith shop, etc., in the northern part of Somers, Conn., but sold it again the same year, and moved, it is supposed, to Massachusetts, probably to Leverett, where two of his brothers resided, or in that vicinity. About 1800 he settled in Litchfield, Herkimer Co., N. Y., where he and his wife died on the dates above stated.

Major-General Rufus L. Howard is a noble specimen of a self-made man. He passed his early boyhood with his parents in Herkimer Co., N. Y., and obtained such elementary knowledge and training as the district school and some private instruction could give. When about fifteen years of age he entered as a clerk in a country store in the town of Schuyler, in Herkimer County, on a salary of five dollars a month and his board. After eight months of service here he changed to a similar store in Frankfort in the same county, where he continued some years, though the business changed ownership several times. While in Frankfort, in addition to the store work, he had the principal charge of the post-office, which was kept in the same place. In the spring of 1839 he went to Buffalo, N. Y., and engaged as clerk in the large grocery and ship-chandlery store of Henry C. Atwater & Co., his compensation to be two hundred and fifty dollars a year. He was soon promoted to the position of head clerk, and in about two years was admitted a partner with one-fourth interest in the business, under the firm name of Williams, Howard & Co. In 1851 he bought out Mr. Williams and thus increased his own interest to five-eighths of the concern. Two years later he withdrew from the firm and engaged in the manufacture of Ketchum's mowing machine, though at first in a limited way. This machine had been experimented with for several years, but had never been made to work satisfactorily. The patentee, becoming quite discouraged, offered his interest for sale. Mr. Howard at length took an assignment of the patent, and after making sundry changes and improvements from time to time, with the assistance of the patentee, produced a machine whose value in agricultural industry can hardly be estimated. The first winter after getting the machine to operate, he built five and sold them. The next year he built seventy-five, which did not supply the market. The third year he built five hundred machines, and the fourth year fifteen hundred, and the next year three thousand and three hundred, and so on. There are now, probably, manufactured in the United States not less than one hundred and fifty thousand mowers, all of which use improvements made or suggested by Mr. Howard, nor is it likely that grass will ever be cut with a machine that does not use them. He may therefore justly claim the merit of having put the first successful mower into the field. As the patents expired from year to year he gradually changed his works into a general foundry and machine manufacturing business, conspicuous in Buffalo, and extensively known as the Howard Iron Works. The growth of these works is worthy of notice, as showing the prudence, energy, and business capacity of the man. In place of three men and a boy whom he at first employed, he has now engaged from two hundred and fifty to three hundred men, and turns out goods to the value of some three hundred thousand dollars a year, and his business is still increasing.

Besides superintending the above works, Mr. Howard is largely engaged in farming and raising choice stock of various kinds for which he has a fine taste. He was the first to introduce into Erie County the Jersey breed of cattle, since so greatly prized by herdsmen.

Mr. Howard has not confined his efforts selfishly to the advancement of his individual interest. He has ever shown his public spirit by taking an active and efficient part in all measures tending to promote the general welfare of the city and State. As early as 1844 he became identified with the "Young Men's Association" in Buffalo, which has advanced to the foremost rank of such institutions in the country. For several years he was its president. He has long been a worthy member and official of Trinity Church, and has done much to promote its secular and spiritual interests. Since 1854 he has been a director, and is now vice-president of White's bank in Buffalo. He was one of nine to start the laying out of that beautiful park which in time will probably be second to none in the country. He was also one of the few who organized the famous "Buffalo Driving Park." He was for several years a trustee in the General Hospital and gave to it much personal attention. In short, no public and beneficent measure has failed to receive his approval and generous support.

For twenty-seven years Mr. Howard was a high official, during twelve of which he was the commander of the Eighth Division National Guard of the State of New York. His voluntary resignation was accepted by the Adjutant-General with "Regret that the National Guard must thus lose the services of so worthy an officer, and one who, during many years exerted himself to improve the organization in his command with marked success." The popular verdict publicly expressed was, "That the Eighth Division loses, by his resignation, a competent commander, and the whole National Guard an able officer, and a noble, genial, and courteous gentleman."

Although Mr. Howard has associated much with men high in civil and military office, and with leaders in party organizations, and has often been urged to accept nominations to office when success was reasonably certain, he has never been drawn into the vortex of political strife, which is further evidence of the sagacity and prudence of the man.

Mary A., their eldest daughter, m. May 14, 1879, Lou. N. Spencer of Evansville, Rock Co., Wis., where they reside.

Fannie died in Beloit, Feb. 14, 1879.

The early years of Mr. N. H. Howard's life were passed on a farm with his father in Milford, Oakland Co., Mich. At the age of sixteen he went to Beloit, Wis., and learned the trade of a harness-maker, and worked at that business about twelve years. He then for five years was engaged in the produce trade, buying and shipping produce of various kinds to Chicago and St. Louis. Since that time he has been in the paper trade, and for the last eight years he has been a traveling agent for the Rock River Paper Co. His home is in Beloit, Wis.

Olive m. in 1839, Benjamin Rice of Royalton, Vt., where they continued to live till her death, Sept. 10, 1870.

Lucy, the youngest child, m. Stephen Scales. She died in Andover, N. H., Mar. 3, 1872. She and her sisters Olive and Erepta, it is said, had no children.

The town records of Pomfret, Conn., and of Reading, Vt., show that William Howard sold in April, 1780, the homestead property he bought of his father in Pomfret about three years before. In October following he purchased a farm of 115 acres in Reading, Vt., where he resided some thirty years, cultivating his farm, and carrying on a large tanning business at the same time. In 1810 he sold his farm and business to his sons Hezekiah and Harvey, and moved to Royalton, Vt., where he and his wife died at the dates stated above. In Reading he seems to have taken an active part in the settlement and management of that infant township. He was chosen Selectman in 1781, the year after the town was organized, and again in 1782 and '83, and was a Constable in 1785. He was also for some time Proprietor's Clerk, and his record, as regards penmanship, spelling, and composition, shows a degree of scholarship superior to the average of that day. He was one of thirty-six members who organized the Reformed Catholic Society of the town in 1796.

LUCY, b. June 25, 1811, in Reading.

Lucy, died Feb., 1829, in Fair Haven, Vt.

Mr. Howard, in connection with his brother Harvey, succeeded his father in business in Reading, and continued there about three years, and then sold out and removed to Fair Haven, in Rutland Comty, Vt. The two brothers carried on business together for about fifty years. They first bought a farm in Fair Haven on West Street, built them a shop, tannery, etc., which they improved for several years. They then sold this property and bought in another part of the village, where they had a large tannery, and also ran a grist-mill and saw-mill, till the death of the elder brother. They were both not only active and successful business men, but were also prominent and valued citizens. They took a personal interest in all local public matters, and were honored with various local offices, such as selectmen, justices of the peace, overseers of the poor, etc. After the death of Hezekiah, his brother

Harvey, who had never married, went to Royalton, where he died Aug. 15, 1877.

He was a carpenter and builder by trade. After following his occupation for some years in his native town and vicinity, he moved to Pontiac, Mich., where he worked a few years, and thence went to Detroit, and carried on a prosperous business, until he built the first court-house and jail for that county, and took, it is said, county orders in payment, which depreciated so much in value as to make the job unprofitable to him.

He and his wife both died in Detroit, as stated above.

Hiram, died Nov. 12, 1823, in Leverett, Mass.

Pegge, the eldest daughter, married Isaac H. Bangs of Leverett, Mass., where they resided until her decease Sept. 26, 1822.

Lucy, their other daughter, did not marry. She remained with her parents, and took an active part in their domestic affairs. She was noted for her filial affections and deep religious emotions. A brief memoir, with extracts from her diary, was published after her decease, in which the author remarks: "In 1816, there being a revival of religion in the place, her attention was arrested, and in the course of the same year she indulged the hope of saving conversion, and also made a public profession of religion. She afterwards, as we have reason to believe, lived a life of faith and prayer. She was possessed of an amiable disposition to which were added the graces of the Spirit."

The extracts copied from her diary and her letters certainly breathe a most devoted piety towards God, and a sleepless anxiety for the spiritual good of others. She died Feb. 26, 1826, in Leverett, of lung fever, after an illness of a little over a week, manifesting to the last a unshaken confidence in her Saviour.

Lieut. Aaron Howard, as he was usually addressed, went from Pomfret, Conn., to Somers, in the same State, with his father, being then under age, and continued to assist him in his farming, tanning, etc. A few days before his sudden death, as the records show, his father gave him a deed of the farm and other property where he then lived in the northwestern part of the town. This was probably in view of Aaron's approaching marriage, and in consideration of his previous services, and a pledge of the future support of his father and mother. Soon after the death of his mother he sold this property to his brother, Smith, and purchased a farm, etc., in Leverett, Mass., a little east of the village, on which he remained till the date of his death.

He was by trade a saddler and harness-maker as well as a tanner and currier. He is remembered by the older people in Leverett as a steady, industrious, and trusted citizen, a worthy and valued member of the church there, constant and devout in his attendance upon public worship, even after his hearing was impaired. His liberality, wise counsel, and Christian example, made his death a bereavement to the Church and to society.

Frank L. was drowned in Chester, May 18, 1854.

Mr. Cooley Howard settled early in life in the town of Chester, Hampden Co., Mass. He was by trade a tanner and currier. With this he connected the boot and shoe business. He was quite prosperous for several years, and gave employment to several hands. Later he was less fortunate. His buildings were destroyed by fire. At times an incipient insanity,—an infirmity inherited from his mother,—impaired his judgment, and in a measure unfitted him for a judicious management of his affairs. Hence, before his death he became reduced in circumstances, and moved to Eastchester, Hampshire Co., Mass., where he soon died. He was an upright and devoted Christian man, and member of the M. E. Church for many years.

Their sons Daniel and Joseph died in infancy in Chebacco. William died in Hampton, Oct. 28, 1736, and Nathan died in April, 1759, unmarried.

Grace, their eldest daughter, m. Oct. 3, 1723, George Martin, Jr., of Hampton, Conn. She had two children, Jonathan, b. Aug. 7, 1734, who died in infancy, and David, b. Feb. 22, 1736, who survived his mother. She died in Hampton, Nov. 28, 1736.

Tabitha married James Keyes of Hampton. Record not found. But it is recorded that "Lucy, daughter of James Keyes, by Tabitha his wife, was born May 9, 1747." Also that "Tabitha, relict of James Keyes, d. Mar. 18, 1808." She had been a worthy and respected member of the Congregational Church in Hampton for some seventy years.

Elizabeth married Francis Bennett, at a date not found. But the records show that the estate of their son Nathan was distributed soon after his decease, one-fourth each to Capt. John Howard, only brother of deceased; to David Martin, heir to Grace Martin; to Tabitha Keyes, wife of James Keyes; and to Elizabeth Bennett, wife of Francis Bennett. No record of her death is found.

The above John Howard and his descendants constitute the second main branch of the ideal genealogical tree. This branch is much less in extent than the first one heretofore described, though it is similar in some of its characteristics. John does not seem to have been bred to any mechanical art. He devoted himself for the most part to agriculture, and to speculation in land. His example in this respect has been imitated in a good degree by his posterity, there having always been more farmers among them than artisans. His name appears upon the Registry of Deeds as early as 1708, while he was yet a young man and unmarried, as a purchaser of land on Plumb Island, and in Chebacco Parish, where he subsequently settled and continued to reside till about 1734. During this period few names occur upon the Register more frequently than his, both as grantee and grantor. His homestead, purchased soon after his marriage, was situated in the northern part of what is now Essex. It consisted of about twenty-five acres of upland, and some marsh lands adjoining, with orchards, dwelling-houses, barns, etc. On Nov. 3, 1733, he deeded this homestead property to Solomon Giddings. The old house, it is said, is still standing, and the property has continued ever since in possession of the Giddings family, being now owned and occupied by Mr. Zeno Elwell, whose wife belongs to the Giddings family line. Ipswich had now become comparatively an ancient town, and about to enter upon the second century of her incorporation. A strong tide of emigration from her was setting to the westward. Mr. Howard, with others, was borne by it to the eastern part of Connecticut, which was then attracting considerable attention. In the same year (1733) that he sold out in Chebacco, he bought for £1100, of Joshua Lasall, a farm of some 300 acres, with a dwelling-house, barn, etc., situated in what was then called Canada, in Windham Co., Conn., and about three miles south of the present village of Hampton. From him and his immediate descendants the district was named, and is still known as "Howard's Valley." The house in which he lived and died descended to his eldest son, Capt. John H., who made it his home during life. It was afterward repaired and occupied by his grandson, Capt. James Howard, while he lived, who bequeathed it to his son, the late Maj.-Gen. John Chaplin Howard, who extensively remodeled and improved it. He occupied it till he removed with his family to Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1841. It is but recently, it is said, that the house was taken down and a new one erected on the same site. The property is now owned and occupied by Mr. Joseph Congdon.

When Mr. Howard settled in Hampton, the country, in a measure, was new and sparsely populated. There were few roads, and those but poorly worked, and society generally was in a formative state. His influence and labor for the public during the few years of his life there seems to have been rather preparative than conspicuous,—on the foundation more than on the superstructure.

Of him personally little can be gathered at this distance of time and absence of early records. His success in life, however, shows that he was a man of marked activity, shrewdness, and prudence. Starting in life with a small patrimony, he continued to add to his means till, at the time of his death, he had accumulated a handsome estate for one in his pursuit.

Lucy, the youngest, died unmarried. She is spoken of as a very lovely and promising young lady.

The above Capt. Howard, as he was usually designated, inherited from his father a large landed estate, which he cultivated as a business with industry and success. In his early life he began to develop those traits of character, abilities, and public spirit which contributed so largely to his distinction and usefulness through all his subsequent life. Windham County was just emerging from its wilderness state. Society and public institutions and ordinances were as yet elementary and transitional. Men of energy, wisdom, and forecast were greatly needed to devise, guide, and impel. Mr. Howard seems to have possessed the qualities suited to the locality and the times. He was wise and prudent in counsel, and judicious in action. He had ample means, and was liberal in the use of them. He early obtained the confidence and respect of the people, which he retained till his death. If a church was to be organized, or a difficulty which had arisen in one was to be settled, he was often delegated to assist in the work. If a school was to be established, a meeting-house to be built or repaired, his name appears as one of the committee. When the powers and privileges of a town are desired he is found active in the preliminary steps, and influential in the success of the enterprise. When troops and supplies are needed for the relief of Boston, he is found among the foremost men to raise and forward them.

Soon after their marriage both he and his wife became members of the Second Congregational Church and Society of Windham, now Hampton, and were active and worthy communicants, indeed, strong pillars of that church during their prolonged lives. It is difficult to over-estimate the influence for good of such a man at such a time, and for future times.

In his sermon, preached at the burial service, Dr. Joseph Huntington of Coventry makes this remark: "I seldom intermeddle with the character of the deceased on an occasion like this, and am ever averse to adulation. But were you all to speak as one man you would say that God hath favored the world with few such men as Capt. Howard, for stability in church and state, for an attachment to good order from the day of his youth to 'good old age,' and with an uncommon advantage to do good arising from his affluent circumstances, in which it pleased Divine Providence to place him."

Mary, their eldest, m. Jan. 4, 1786, Benjamin Griffin of Hampton, Conn., who moved, some two years after, to Cooperstown, Otsego Co., N. Y., where she died.

Sarah m. in 1787, in Coventry, Samuel Huntington. They also settled in Cooperstown, where they passed their lives. She is described by one of her nieces as the "beloved aunt." She had no children.

Anne married Nathaniel Farnham, and settled in Richfield, Otsego Co., N. Y., where she died July 9, 1803, leaving a son and two daughters. On her tombstone are the following lines :

"Here rests a woman, good without pretense,
Blessed with plain reason and sober sense;
Heaven has its purest gold by torture tried,—
The saint sustained it, but the woman died."

Capt. John Howard, the third, it is said was an officer in a company of grenadiers in Windham, Conn., now Hampton, and commanded the company in the battle of Bunker Hill, and died the next day from fatigue and wounds received. He was buried in Cambridge, Mass. His brother James settled his estate, which inventoried at some £500. The children were all legatees of their grandfather, the boys receiving a portion of land in the "Susquehanna Country," and the girls £8 cash each.

The widow Zerviah subsequently married a Mr. Hawkins, and with her children moved to Otsego Co., N. Y. She died in Burlington in that county, it is believed.

The further record of the family is imperfectly known.

Lucy, the other daughter, m. Nov. 8, 1816, Sylvester Walker of New Berlin, N. Y. She is the only one of the family now (1881) living. She resides in Springville, Lenawee Co., Mich.

The father, John Howard, the fourth, was a tanner and currier by trade, and carried on that business for many years in Cooperstown, N. Y., where he settled in early life. He subsequently exchanged his tannery for a farm, which he cultivated to the date of his death, which was sudden and sad. Seeing a person struggling in the water he swam across the Susquehanna River and rescued him. In attempting to reswim the river he became entangled among some floating logs, and was drowned.

Harriett B., the youngest daughter, m. Oct. 31, 1881, William H. Eagleson, also of Ottawa City, Canada, their present residence.

Mr. James Howard was by trade a carpenter and builder. About the year 1821 he migrated from Otsego Co., N. Y., to Canada, and settled for life in Maitland, Ontario, across the St. Lawrence River, and not far from Ogdensburg, N. Y., where he continued to work at his trade for several years. He afterwards purchased a farm which he cultivated with success. Though not to the kingdom born, and hence thought by some not eligible to civil office, he became quite prominent in public life as a Justice of the Peace, Township Councillor, etc. In religion he is said to have been a zealous Methodist, and a leading member of that denomination. In all the relations of life he was a useful and respected citizen.

FREDERICK CAMPBELL, b. Jan. 6, 1878, in Brooklyn, N. Y.

CLARENCE BURRITT, b. Dec. 9, 1880, in Coshocton, Ohio.

Mr. Wm. Henry Howard seems to have had the not uncommon experiences of the ups and downs of this life. For four years, from the age of seventeen, he was a school-teacher. Then for several years he was a clerk for a firm in Ilion, Herkimer Co., N. Y. He then made his way to New York city. In 1843, as one of a firm, he engaged in the manufacture of glass-ware in New Jersey. But the financial gales of 1857 and 1858 wrecked that enterprise, leaving no claims for salvage. He next opened a broker's office on the corner of Washington and Cortland streets, but not succeeding to his mind in that business, he moved to Pittsburgh, Pa., and opened a hotel there, which he managed with success, till in 1877 he was overborne by a complication of diseases, which has not only incapacitated him for further business, but has rendered him an intense and almost helpless sufferer.

Phebe, his eldest daughter, m. Oct. 24, 1804, James Carey of Scotland Parish, Windham Co., Conn. They afterwards settled in Canterbury, it is believed, where she died. She was the mother of four children.

Lora, the next daughter, m. November, 1799, Elias Parks of Hampton, where they resided about three years, and then moved to New Hartford, Oneida Co., N. Y. After a residence there of several years they moved to Oswego, N. Y., where she died Jan. 13, 1813. She had six children. Her second daughter, born about 1803, is still living (1883) with a friend in Ohio. An elder sister died there Aug. 27, 1882.
 Both unmarried.

Chloe, Mr. Howard's third daughter, m. October, 1811, Harvey G. Morse of Hampton. They first settled in Clarence, Erie Co., N. Y., where her three children were born.
 They afterwards moved to Norwalk, Huron Co., Ohio, where she died in 1834.

Eleanor, the youngest daughter, m. December, 1811, Jonathan Kingsley of Windham Co., Scotland Parish, where they continued to reside for several years, and then moved to Madison Co., Ohio, and finally to Mechanicsburg, Champaign Co., Ohio, where she died Nov. 11, 1846, the mother of four children.

Lucy Caroline, only daughter by his second wife, m. Oct.
 20, 1841, Alexander McCrea of Sterling, Cayuga Co., N. Y.

They have had six children. Their residence is in Auburn, N. Y. He is a merchant there in prosperous circumstances, and with his family is highly esteemed.

Mr. William Howard was an industrious farmer in his native town, where he continued to reside till near the close of his life, and where his fifteen children were born. His public and patriotic spirit was especially shown during the dark days of the Revolutionary War, in which he did valiant service for two years, first as Captain, and afterwards as Colonel. He took an active part in the battle at White Plains, and other engagements. In the summer of 1822, he started from Hampton, Conn., with the younger members of his family, for central Ohio, where his elder sons had previously settled. He had proceeded as far as Morristown, in eastern Ohio, when he was taken seriously ill, and after a few days of suffering he died there, as stated in the above record. The widow, with her five little children, after encountering many difficulties and hardships incident to the newness of the country and the inconveniences of travel, completed the journey. In a short time, however, she returned eastward, and settled in Saratoga Co., N. Y. When her sons had reached young manhood she accompanied them to Syracuse, N. Y., where she passed the remaining years of her somewhat eventful life.

This only daughter m. June 6, 1854, Rowland C. Moulton of Woodstock, Ohio, where they now reside, in the house built by her father. Mr. Moulton was educated for the bar, but has engaged extensively in farming of late years. They have had two daughters, one of whom died in infancy.

The personal history of Mr. Anson Howard and family is essentially but a counterpart to that of many other of the kindred families. As a life labor he followed farming, the leading occupation of his father and the Howard Valley ancestors. He remained in Hampton, his native place, till some five years after his marriage, when, catching the migratory spirit of the age and race, he gathered his family and household effects into one of those long, covered, two-horse wagons, and on the 10th of June, 1817, he set out for the then far distant Eldorado, the West. For six weeks this team, like an Alexandrine verse, "dragged its slow length along," much of the way through a thinly-settled, mountainous, and almost pathless country. Few of us who now use the rapid transit of railroads, with their palace and sleeping-cars, can appreciate the fatigue, the delay, the privations, and the thousand and one discomforts of such a journey. On the 22d of July following, they reached what was formerly part of Darby Plains, now Woodstock, Champaign Co., Ohio. This section of the State at that time was nearly in its primeval condition. Settlements were few and widely separated. The land was wooded, undrained, unfenced, and uncultivated. Here Mr. Howard drove his stake, and with a stout heart and brawny arm commenced his new and arduous work. Seconded in all things by an able, noble-hearted, and cultured wife, a farm was soon subdued from its wild condition, and brought into a high state of cultivation. A substantial brick house was erected, and his family was surrounded with comforts and plenty. He and his wife, however, did not limit their labors to themselves and their own household. Their influence and efforts extended to the families which were multiplying around them. They gave a helping hand to those in need of assistance. They were foremost in establishing schools and facilities for public worship, and were largely instrumental at an early day, in establishing a library, which is still a means of great good in the place. He also greatly assisted his neighbors in obtaining perfect titles to their lands. He is spoken of as an unassuming man, and free from political aspirations. He acted as one of the Commissioners appointed by the government to locate the county-seats in some of the north-west counties of the State, and was, for a number of years, one of the Commissioners of his own county. By their industry, prudence, and the increased value of their real estate they acquired an ample fortune.

As one rolls smoothly and rapidly along those broad-acred farms, so well cultivated and enclosed, with their stately dwellings and spacious out-buildings, and notes the thriving villages, the commodious church and school edifices, he can with difficulty "awake his senses" to the condition of the country seventy years ago, nor can he adequately estimate the influence for good of such pioneers as Mr. and Mrs. Anson Howard.

Mary P., their eldest child and only daughter, m. July 31, 1867, Leon A. Martin, a farmer. They reside in Woodstock, and have five children living, and one died in infancy.

Mr. Anson P. Howard inherited not only a portion of the estate, but also many of the sterling qualities of his parents. He early developed a strong thirst for knowledge, and a capacity to acquire it. After obtaining a good common-school education, he studied surveying and other branches of a higher grade, under private school instruction. His extensive knowledge of books and subjects in general is mainly the result of his untiring industry in reading, fostered and guided during long winter evenings, in his younger years, by his parents; and never since has he ceased his companionship with useful books, notwithstanding the multiplicity of the cares and duties of his active life. He has further added to his mental stores by extensive travel in his own country, and in 1851 by a tour to Europe. By occupation he is a farmer, in the broader and higher significance of that term, and is widely known as a cultivator of fine-blooded stock, in all which he has been eminently successful.

Though he has been no partisan politician or office-seeker, he is a man of positive convictions on public questions, and of corresponding political action, and has often been called into the service of the State. He gave liberally of his means, and worked earnestly for the cause of the Union during the war of the late Rebellion. In 1861, '62, and '63, he was chosen to represent his district in the State Legislature. The two years following, 1864 and '65, he was elected to the State Senate from the Eleventh District, and was re-elected in 1869, '70, and '71. In 1876 he was chosen a Presidential Elector from his State. More recently he has served as a member of the State Board, to equalize the value of real estate in Ohio. As he is still living, I forbear to say more than simply to add, that few in the State probably to-day enjoy more fully than he the confidence and respect of his constituents.

"Late may he ascend into heaven."

Mr. George W. Howard was also a machinist and railroad engineer, but seems to have been more prominent and enterprising than either of his brothers. In an obituary notice of him published in the Syracuse Journal, Nov. 16, 1878, it is stated, that having passed his boyhood days with his mother near Saratoga Springs, N. Y., that "at the age of seventeen, with a recommendation signed by Gideon Davidson and Chancellor Walworth of Saratoga, he obtained the position of fireman on the road then completed from Schenectady to Utica, and with his brother Perkins ran on the first engine that ever passed over the road, carrying the directors on a tour of inspection. Afterwards he was called from Schenectady to this city, when he put together and ran the first engine that ever went out of Syracuse, Apr. 19, 1839. With an aptitude and love for his work he soon rose to the position of engineer, and was employed on various roads, which later were merged in the leading roads of the State. For seven years he held the position of master mechanic of the Syracuse & Binghamton railroad. It was during this time that the road fell into the hands of the late George Peabody, and the writer has often heard Mr. Howard relate the story of his ride on the engine with the great philanthropist as he passed over the road to inspect its condition. Subsequently he took an engine to run on the New York Central, and remained connected with that road until his failing health incapacitated him for further labor. At the time of the powder explosion in this city, when Syracuse was almost paralyzed by the shock of the awful tragedy, Mr. Howard was one of the first to respond to the needs of the hour, and with his engine went to Auburn for physicians and aid for the suffering victims. At the time of the murder of the Van Ness family near Auburn, he took the officers of the law upon his engine and came down the road, dropping them off at various points to search for the murderer. Social and genial in his nature, as age and ill-health shut him out from the active pursuits of life, he delighted in reminiscences of his eventful career, and dwelt with personal pride on the growth and prosperity of the great road he was so many years identified with. Conscientious in the discharge of his duties, for a period extending over forty years, he was ever faithful to the interests of his employers, through the heat of summer and the cold of winter, through perils and danger; under all the changes in the administration of railroad affairs, he proudly enjoyed the confidence of his superiors."

James, Jr., their son, died unmarried. He studied preparatory for college in Plainfield Academy, then under the principalship of Nathan Hewitt. In 1809 he graduated from Yale College, and subsequently, having fitted himself for the bar, he commenced the practice of his profession in his native village, and gave promise of eminence and usefulness as a public man. He had represented his town in the State Legislature, and had the confidence and esteem of his constituents. His early death was deeply lamented by all who knew him. On his headstone in Hampton South burying-ground are the following lines:

“ Fondly we viewed thy rising virtues shine,
And by our wishes measured out thy line.
We wipe our tears, we will our sighs repel,
And force our faltering tongues to say, ‘T is well.’
’T is well, but by this awful stroke, how crost
Our blooming hopes, our expectations lost.”

Lucy, their eldest daughter, married Dr. Darius Hutchins of Abington, Conn.

Sarah married James H. Cady of Providence, R. I.

Maria P. remained unmarried. She died in Abington, Conn., June 13, 1880.

Anne C., the youngest daughter, married Dr. Waldo Hutchins of Brooklyn, N. Y. The dates of marriage and death of these daughters and their further history have not been traced.

James Howard, senior, was a worthy son of worthy parents. In many respects he followed in the footsteps of his father, from whom he inherited a valuable property. He was enterprising and public-spirited. He took a lively interest and prominent part in all civil and local affairs. He was patriotic and influential during the trying years of the Revolutionary War, and at its close he was one of a committee of leading citizens to consult on matters pertaining to the country, the adoption of the Constitution, and settlement of the government. In 1792 he was one of three, a committee to have the courts held in more central and convenient places. In addition to his farming interests, he early engaged in manufactures. He also run a grist-mill, a saw mill, and a fulling mill, in the valley. Less prudent, perhaps, than his father, he was active and venturesome, and extended his business, especially the purchase and sale of real estate, to such an unwise limit that at his death, although his estate inventoried a large amount, the final settlement left comparatively a small sum to his heirs.

Gen. John C. Howard, during his residence in Hampton, was extensively engaged in farming. He also built and operated for a while a woolen mill on Little River, a stream running through his farm. He does not seem to have taken any particular interest in civil and political matters, but had quite a taste for military affairs. He became Major-General of the Second Division Connecticut Militia, which office he held for a number of years with honor to himself, and to the satisfaction of the authorities of the State. In 1841 he moved from Hampton to Brooklyn, N. Y., where he passed the rest of his life.

Nathan, their son, d. Apr. 22, 1864, unmarried. All the others, except John, died in infancy. Seldom does a family record show a more sad bereavement than the above.

Dr. Nathan Howard was an eminent physician in Coventry, Conn. Where he pursued his preparatory and professional studies is not stated. At the early age of twenty he began to practice in Coventry, as the successor to Dr. Samuel Rose, then recently deceased, and he continued in that field of labor for nearly fifty-eight years. Though so young he early secured the confidence of the public, and by his skillful and assiduous attention to his patients he soon acquired an extensive practice, which he retained through life. He was returning from a professional visit when he was overtaken by the disease which proved fatal to him. He was also greatly respected by his medical brethren, and held various positions of honor and influence in their meetings and associations. The honorary degree of M.D. was conferred upon him by Yale College in 1818. As a citizen he was no less highly esteemed and trusted. In 1802 he was elected to the office of Town Clerk, and, with one exception, he was annually re-elected while he lived. He was likewise Treasurer of the town for many years, and repeatedly represented the town in the State Legislature. In 1803 he was appointed a Justice of the Peace, and he continued to hold that office till legally disqualified by age. It was, however, in his Christian and domestic life that his worth and loveliness shone out most conspicuously. Soon after his marriage both he and his wife united with the Congregational Church in Coventry, and they remained among its most stable, consistent, and useful members. During the larger part of his subsequent life Dr. Howard held the office of deacon in the church, and he discharged the duties of that office in a manner uniformly exemplary and acceptably to the members. Under all circumstances he proved himself a firm friend and supporter of religion and good order; and though he was engaged in an extensive practice, he set an example worthy of more general imitation by the profession, being seldom absent from public worship on the Sabbath. He lived apparently for the good of others, and did not weary in his work, nor outlive his usefulness. In his wife he found a helper eminently meet for him. Her parents came from Massachusetts, and were among the early settlers in Coventry. One of her brothers was Capt. Nathan Hale, who died a martyr to the cause of civil liberty and his country's independence during the Revolutionary war. She was the virtuous woman described by the pen of inspiration, "whose price is far above rubies. The heart of her husband safely trusted in her. She did him good and not evil all the days of her life. She looked well to the way of her household." She understood well the appropriate sphere of female influence, and confining herself to that sphere she secured the respect and esteem of all around her.

Dr. Howard and his wife were both called to pass through scenes of great affliction. They each belonged to families of twelve children, but both lived to see all their brothers and sisters and parents consigned to the grave; and of their own nine children, only one survived them. Yet in all these trials they "charged not God foolishly." Their faith in an infinite Father sustained them. They were not unequally yoked together. They both loved and revered the institutions planted by the pilgrim fathers. They both loved the doctrines and ordinances of the gospel, as understood by the early churches of New England, and were not carried about by every wind of doctrine. In all their conjugal relations they were "the kindest and the happiest pair." In equanimity of mind, in mildness of disposition, in sweetness of temper, and in loveliness of character in other respects they were much alike, and lived in great harmony together for over fifty years. "They were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided," being buried at the same time and in the same grave, attended by a large concourse of mourning friends and citizens.

CHAUNCEY, b. Apr. 21, 1812, " "

Dr. John Howard studied medicine with a view to practice as a physician, first under the direction of his father, probably, and afterwards under Dr. Coggswell, an eminent physician of Hartford, Conn. He also, it is believed, attended lectures in New Haven. But his failing health prevented him from carrying his purpose into effect. He died of consumption in the twenty-ninth year of his age.

Their son, John Ripley Howard, having lost his father while a mere child, and his mother being an invalid, was taken with his brother Chauncey into the family of his grandfather, Dr. Nathan Howard, where he received the most affectionate and parental training. From the published notices of his death we learn that his early life gave promise of a manhood of marked eminence and usefulness. But his bright morning was early overshadowed by a murky cloud, which shut him off effectually from the aspirations, the activities, and pursuits of active life. "Disease had marked him for her own." He was early prostrated by an acute affection of the heart, and for long, long years he was an intense and unremitted sufferer. "For him, otherwise capable of high achievements for himself, for mankind, and for truth, there was wearisome pain at high noon when the world was at work, and at midnight when the world was at rest," till the sufferer was laid at rest on Mar. 10, 1873, by the side of his kin, near the beautiful lake which he loved so well. "His rare intellectual abilities, his nice sense of honor and integrity, his goodness of heart and peculiarly gentle disposition, gave him a warm place in the affections of his neighbors. His life was a continued illustration of the sweet Christian graces he lived to exemplify and adorn." He occupied the Homestead and was unmarried.

The Hon. Chauncey Howard, second son of Dr. John and Lucy (Ripley) Howard, never married. The following lines are mostly condensed from a sketch of the State officers of Connecticut, published in the Hartford Evening Post, Jan. 7, 1880: "The Hon. Chauncey Howard of Coventry, entered Amherst College in 1830, and graduated with the class of 1835, having left college for a year to engage in teaching. Soon after graduating he entered the law office of Chief Justice William W. Ellsworth, where he qualified himself, and was admitted to the bar in 1839. He was made Clerk of the County in 1844, and by successive appointments he held the office for nearly twenty-five years, voluntarily retiring in 1873. For some years he was editorially connected with the Hartford Daily Courant. In 1847 he was chosen a representative from Hartford to the State Legislature. In 1875 he was elected Senator from the 21st District, and in 1877 he was again elected to the House by the Republicans of Coventry. He was also at one time Treasurer of the town and city of Hartford. For the past year he has served as Comptroller of Public Accounts, fully meeting the expectations of his friends who called him to the position without solicitation on his part. The duties of his office have been considerably increased by the occupation of the new capitol, of which he is custodian, and the large amount of work on the grounds under his supervision. In every public employment through a long and useful life he has acquitted himself with dignity, intelligence, and fidelity to the public interests."

While the above is all true as to his public life, his private life is subject to this criticism,—he has lived a bachelor, and the Howard name in his branch of the family terminates in him, "No son to him succeeding."

Tabitha m. Benjamin Moulton of Wenham, Mass., pub. Jan. 31, 1740. They resided for some time in Wenham, but subsequently moved to eastern Connecticut, and died in Hampton, Conn. Rude head-stones in the south burying-ground show their names distinctly, but the date of their death is not legible.

Abigail, the youngest daughter, m. Mar. 27, 1742, Stephen Smith, Jr., of Ipswich. Her further history is not found.

Jeremiah, their son, belonged to Co. 8, Capt. Samuel Rhodes, Third Mass. Regiment, Col. Jeremiah Moulton, in the expedition against Louisberg, in 1745, and it is supposed he died there or soon after, as he is not mentioned in his father's will, which was executed in 1758.

Samuel and Daniel were drowned May 15, 1739, near Ipswich, and William d. Jan 17, 1729.

The above Samuel Howard constitutes the third main branch before spoken of, of the ideal Howard genealogical tree. He was a prominent member of the South Congregational Church in Ipswich, and esteemed for his exemplary and Christian character; but the town records do not show that he was any way conspicuous as a public man or an office-holder. He was of a quiet and reserved disposition, affable in his intercourse with others, and upright in all his dealings. He was attentive to his business, which was that of a weaver, industrious and frugal in his habits, and as a consequence he was prosperous. He not only retained the portion devised to him by his father, but ultimately purchased the portions of land inherited by his brothers William and John, and added to these other real estate. He occupied through life the old homestead, and died in the house in which he was born. The house is still standing, and was fully herein described when speaking of his father William (2). Among his effects was a large, well-bound quarto Bible, purchased in 1742,—a somewhat rare possession in those days. It was carefully preserved by his descendants for several generations, but was finally lost in the pension office in Washington, D. C. A fac-simile of the fly-leaf and of the record upon it is in the possession of the writer of this, but the book itself cannot be found. It is doubtless destroyed.

The foregoing record shows that he was sadly afflicted by death in his family, one son alone surviving him, to transmit his name.

Mary, their eldest daughter, died in infancy. The second daughter of the same name married Joseph Harris of Hampton, Conn., date not found.

Elizabeth was unmarried. She was a member of the church in Hampton, and was esteemed a very worthy, amiable, Christian woman. She died about 1792.

John, their son, was also unmarried. He was a jeweler by trade. Was in business in Hartford, where he died Sept. 6, 1804, and was buried in the old cemetery near the Center Congregational Church. His monument is still standing. A brass clock of his make is still in use in the family of his brother William.

The history of their son Samuel is unknown. He left Langdon, N. H., about 1800, for the west, which is the last the family know of him.

Stephen Howard, senior, was a tailor by trade. The record of his marriage speaks of him as from Harvard, Mass. He was probably in business there at that time, and perhaps later. By the will of his father, made in 1758, he was named sole executor and residuary legatee. In 1769, some three years after his father's death, having settled the estate and disposed of his interest therein, he moved to Hampton, in Windham Co., Conn., and located on the east side of Little River Valley, directly east of the village of Hampton, supposed to be in part the property now or recently owned and occupied by Mr. James Fuller. Here he continued to reside till his decease. How long his widow survived him does not appear, as no record of her death is found. She and his son Jeremiah settled the estate.

Betsey, their second daughter, m. June 4, 1809, Isaac Burbank of Worcester, Mass. She was the mother of seven children, and died at the residence of one of her daughters, Mrs. Hanlet L. Barber, in Binghamton, N. Y., Sept. 11, 1876, in the ninetieth year of her age.

Polly m. Jan. 1, 1810, Willard Harding of Alstead, N. H. She had eight children, and died in Boston, Mass., Nov. 24, 1863. One of her sons, the Rev. Willard M. Harding, is a minister in Boston, and soliciting agent for the Plymouth Monument Association.

Amelia died in early childhood.

Adaline, the youngest daughter, m. Apr. 14, 1822, Edmund Walker of Langdon, N. H., where her five children were born, and where she died Apr. 21, 1872.

In the life of this Jeremiah Howard there is little to distinguish him from many others of that period. Soon after the Declaration of Independence was declared, and before he had reached his majority, he volunteered in the military service in Capt. Fuller's Company, Col. Storr's Regiment, and marched from his home in Hampton, then Windham, Conn., and participated in the battle of Long Island. He then enlisted in Capt. James Cleveland's Company of Artificers, attached to Col. Durkee's Regiment, and marched to Fort Washington; was engaged in making the chevaux-de-frieze across the Hudson river till driven away by the enemy, then retired to Fort Lee; marched in the retreat of Washington across New Jersey to Newark, New Brunswick, Trenton, and across the Delaware river; was in Bristol, Pa., when Gen. Washington captured the Hessians at Trenton, and was discharged near the former place in January, 1777, having served six months. In April following he was drafted for two months, and did guard duty at Groton, Conn. In 1778 he again volunteered in Capt. Joseph Durkee's Company, Col. Worthington's Regiment, and arrived at Howland's Ferry in Rhode Island on the night that Gen. Sullivan retreated off the Island. From there they marched to Providence, thence to Harwich, where he was discharged. He ranked in the military as sergeant.

On March 5, 1777, in connection with his mother, he took out letters of administration on his father's estate, which he duly settled, and the personal and real property was legally distributed to the heirs. A few years later he moved from Hampton, Conn., to Langdon, Sullivan Co., N. H., near the line of Alstead, Cheshire Co. Here he commenced in earnest a pioneer life. The country was heavily wooded, hilly, and sparsely inhabited; no roads, no schools or churches, and the nearest grist-mill was seven miles away. With characteristic energy and pluck he built him a log hut, cleared a portion of ground, and evinced a disposition that he had come to stay. Other families soon settled near him. He provided instruction for his own and other children in his cabin, and made it a place also of religious worship, defraying mostly the expenses himself. He next erected a grist-mill and saw-mill near his premises in Alstead, which have been kept up and widely patronized to the present time. It is related that at first he had to carry his grists on his back, guided by marked trees, seven miles, to get them ground ; but before his death people came a much greater distance to his mills. His original cabin soon gave place to a more commodious dwelling. Schools and churches worthy the name succeeded, through his labors and influence, sustained in all by a companion meet for him in sympathy and vigor of life. Several of their posterity still reside on and near the old homestead in Alstead, who are mostly worthy scions of the paternal stock.
